Cotton Comes Back

A Ten Page Ad

Wasting $10,000,000,000

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1929, King Features Synd., Inc.

ONE MEXICAN, one Spaniard, two Americans, arrested in New York, were going to Europe with $750,000 taken from banks raided in Mexico City.

An American court will decide on the nature of the loot. If it's war, the men arrested will keep it, as the allies keep all the gold they can get in Germany.

If it's rebellion, the men will go to jail and the money back to Mexico. As the men were beaten, they will probably be classed as rebels.

Cotton growers will be glad to hear the big department stores are specializing in cotton goods. "Cottons arrive," is the announcement of one store, biggest in New York, doing about $90,000,000 a year.

"Dotted swiss," "pique" and "ginghams" are featured energetically.

"Often women change," the French say. Real or imitation silks have been the rage, now king cotton comes back.

If Americans will advertise and emphasize "cotton goods grown and made in America" instead of advertising "British cotton cloth," that will help.

Merchants, to whom effective advertising is important, will be interested in one advertisement by "Walker's" department store, published yesterday in the Los Angeles Examiner, the advertisement, appearing in the Examiner exclusively, filled ten pages.

Those who think such an investment excessive in high price medium are mistaken.

It is important to deserve success. It is equally important to COMMAND ATTENTION.

Loud whispers if you can afford to yell.

This country did eight to ten billions in foreign trade last year, but Dr. Klein, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, says American business methods waste eight to ten billions each year. Through less pronounced, imperfect merchandise distribution, disorderly marketing, excess able goods, high cost of unsystematic warehousing, cause part of the loss.

Two hundred million dollars to $300,000,000 a year could be saved by improved handling methods. Look into the "skid platform" device. Henry Ford suggested the 5-day work week, that workers might have time to spend and enjoy their earnings." Prosperity, according to Ford, must depend on wise spending of the ninety billions per year collected by wage earners.

New York's building trades take the suggestion seriously and 150,000 men by threatening a strike have won the five-day week, with five and a half days pay.

The workers, well rested, can, if they choose, do as much in five days as they have done in six. That's what they should do, in justice to other men.

Senator Capper of Kansas, trusted by farmers, backs President Hoover's farm bill. He opposes the debenture subsidy plan, which would pay a bonus to exporting middlemen, cost the tax payers heavily, and do the farmer little, if any good.

Russia attacks farm relief intelligently. Albert Kahn of Detroit, one of the ablest architects in America, has been engaged to spend $4,000,000 on tractor factories, at the mouth of the Volga river.

Mr. Kahn, who builds all of Henry Ford's factories, will have at his disposition all the Ford plans. The factories will produce 40,000 tractors a year, sold at cost, on long credit to farmers.

Well call that "paternalism," here. But perhaps it's only commonsense.

We may even learn something from Russia.

Owen D. Young, able American, is thought to be behind the German reparations problem.

His suggestion approved by Britain would let Germany pay annuities for 37 years, instead of 58 years, beginning with $402,000,000 a year, instead of $600,000,000 increasing payments by $6,000,000 a year for 10 years.

It would be better to let Europe settle its own quarrels, this country keeping out of them. But, since we must meddle, we seem to have chosen well in selecting Mr. Young.

Prohibition agents ransacked the U S warship Richmond for four hours, looking for whiskey. They did not find any.

5-Cent Maximum Light Rate Possible in Boston

ARREST OF HEFLIN IS SOUGHT IN BROCKTON

HUB LIGHT RATE CUT POSSIBLE

A maximum household electric light rate of 5 cents could be inaugurated everywhere without unfairness to the companies, and in many cases even such a low rate would include too high a margin of profit according to Morris Cooke, power expert, it is reported received today by the Massachusetts department of public utilities.

"Fair rates for domestic service will treble the use of electricity in the American home and thereby largely lighten the drudgery of housekeeping," asserts the expert.

He has just completed a survey of the industry, the most extensive ever undertaken, he contends, and including 45 privately-owned and 19 public plants in 10 different states.

His study dealt for the most part with distribution costs—the cost to the company of delivering current to the individual consumer—be-

NEW PERIL IN N. H. FLOOD

While residents of Colebrook, N. H., faced another flood menace today, the town of Berlin, N. H., began the work of repairing damage caused by a tornado and thunderstorm.

Sweeping up the Androscoggin valley, the storm fell on Berlin with demoniac fury, opening old wounds, breaking open buildings and starting a fire which burned to the ground the two-story Steady block.

The electric lighting plant was put out of commission and its system demolished by the felling of half a mile of poles in the path of the gale.

The twister completed its work of destruction in about three minutes and then disappeared completely. No personal injuries were reported in Berlin nor was the storm known to have wrought any damage in the surrounding countryside.

The roof of a two-story garage was torn off, two three-story brick blocks fared similarly with extensive damage to their interiors, the roof of the town hall was battered, as was that of the Albert Theatre, and the Steady block, a two-story wooden building, was consumed by flames.

At Colebrook, emerging from the debris strewn on it by the recent floods caused by the breaking of the Balsams dam, a new danger threatened.

Heavy and long-continued rains

Why I Did Not 'Choose' to Run Again for Presidency

By CALVIN COOLIDGE

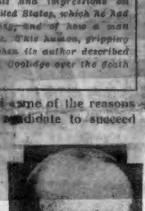
Copyright, 1929, International Magazine Co., Inc.

The second installment of Calvin Coolidge's own story, published in Nay Cosmopolitan, is reprinted in this issue. In the first part Mr. Coolidge told of his thoughts and impressions on assuming the office of President of the United States, which he had never considered himself capable of filling and of how a new home when he can be used no more. This human, gripping document rose to heights of poignancy when the author described in simple words his grief and that of Mrs. Coolidge over the death of their son, John.

PERHAPS I have already indicated some of the reasons why I did not desire to be a candidate to succeed myself.

The Presidential office takes a heavy toll of those who occupy it and those who are dear to them. While we should not refuse to spend and be spent in the service of our country, it is hazardous to attempt what we feel is beyond our strenght to accomplish.

I had never wished to run in 1928, and had determined to make a public announcement at a sufficiently early date so that the party would have ample time to choose someone else. An appropriate occasion for that announcement seemed to be the fourth anniversary of my taking office. The reasons I can give may not appear very convincing, but I am confident my decision was correct.



CALVIN COOLIDGE

My personal and official relations have all been peculiarly pleasant. The Congress has not always done all that I wished, but they have done very little that I did not approve. So far as I can judge, I have been especially fortunate in having the approbation of the country.

But irrespective of the third-term policy, the Presidential office is of such a nature that it is difficult to conceive how one man can successfully serve the country for a term of more than eight years.

While I am in favor of continuing the long-established custom of the country in relation to a third term

BERLIN FEARS NEW RED RIOT

Berlin, May 6 (AP)—Threats of new violence loomed today to mar hopes built on last night's peacefulness in Naukolln and Wedding districts, where police were in full control after four days' bloody Communist rioting.

A resolution was passed calling on workers throughout the city for a general strike at 2 p. m. Wednesday.

Meanwhile the state of siege continued in Wedding and Neukolln. No one was allowed abroad after 9 p. m. and until after 4 a. m. today.

At Winnipeg, Keith, a pilot for only a month, made an expert landing.

MITCHELL LEADS IN GOLF PLAY

Gullane, Scot., May 6 (AP)—All day long through a driving wind and soaking downpour of rain, entrants in the British open golf championship went through one of the worst qualifying ordeals in the history of the event.

Forty competitors who finished are American. Ed. Dudley, who scored 85 for his first 18 holes, was in danger of failing to qualify.

Abe Mitchell, English professional, with a sensational score of 76 over the Gullane municipal course led the field for about half the finishers.

Dudley will need a round of 75 tomorrow to score the 160 for 36 holes which the expert observers have fixed as the likely qualifying figure.

After 36 holes the field will be reduced to the low 100 and ties who will then enter the championship proper at 72 holes with a further cut Thursday night.

CHARGE SENATOR HAD NO PERMIT TO SPEAK WHEN CLASH OCCURRED

Brockton, May 6.—A warrant for the arrest of U. S. Senator J. Thomas Heflin, (Dem.) of Alabama., will be sought tonight at a meeting of the common council, it was declared today by Councillor Howard A. Coleman.

Councillor Coleman, who is of the same political party, said he will introduce a resolve asking for a warrant on the ground that Senator Heflin, last March 13, spoke at a meeting for which no permit had been obtained.

It was at this meeting, where Heflin made an anti-Catholic address, that a bottle was hurled at the Alabama senator. It missed him and struck a policeman.

For the past week Heflin has been deserted vainly to get the Senate to cause a resolution depicting the "attack" on him a Brockton.

Heflin's address in Brockton was made to members of the Ku Klux Klan, of which organization he is the recognized spokesman in the Senate.

During the address he vilified Catholics in his usual manner and declared that "the Catholic political

TWO BALLOONS STILL IN AIR

Pittsburgh, May 6 (INS)—Two of the 12 balloons that took off here Saturday evening in the 1929 national elimination races were still in the air today, with possibilities of setting a new record, in their drift over New England.

Wearing a mask over the lower part of his face, a tall man walked into the fruit store at 3201 Washington st., Jamaica Plain, at noon today, pointed a revolver at Miss Victoria Kaljian, 18, daughter of the proprietor, and demanded her $500 engagement ring.

The girl told him she was not wearing the ring today, whereupon he remarked:

"Well, we'll take the cash register."

Just then the telephone rang, and the holdup man, empty-handed, dashed out the door, where he was joined by an accomplice, and the two ran down Washington st. and disappeared.

POWER EXPERT FINDS PUBLIC OVERCHARGED FOR ELECTRICITY

SAYS LIGHT RATE COULD BE 5 CENTS

cause, he said, investigators were met constantly with the statement by company officials:

"Oh, yes, we could afford to furnish the current for nothing; what costs is distributing it—getting it to the place where the customer wants to use it."

"The studies prove that there is nothing to this statement," reports Cooke. "For a use of 360 kilowatt hours per year, the present national average—the cost of distribution amounts to about two cents per kw. hour; for 500 kw. hours per year this fails to one and one-half cents, and for 1000 kilowatt hours annually the distribution item is about three-quarters of a cent.

"Proper domestic current rates will result immediately in a tremendous increase in the use of current in homes, not only for lighting, but for the mechanization of home work, taking the burden of housework from the shoulders of women and putting it on machines now available but not generally in use because of the high cost of current for operation.

CONCEAL COSTS

"Through improper assignment of costs, the rate to large industrial consumers is kept at a relatively low figure while the rate to householders is kept as high as possible.

"This is due to factors which bulwark the concealment of distribution costs, one of which is the old superstition that peak loads still come with evening household illumination, when in reality the peak now comes when commercial demand is at its highest, the load dropping in the evening."

Offers $60,000 for Sterling Power Plant

Sterling, May 6—Local voters will decide within the next two weeks whether the town should sell its municipal lighting plant to the New England Power Co. or continue its operation as at present, buying its electricity, as for the past 25 years, from that company. The New England Power Company has asked the citizens to sell the plant to it for $60,000.

Back of this meeting lies the request of the company for permission to run high-tension wires across a number of public highways. The company has purchased in some instances entire estates and in others easements in such a way that it may get its power from the Pratt's Junction transformer station, to which it hopes to come the power from Bellows Falls, Vt., and further up the Connecticut river to its distributing plant at Athol.

The town has expended about $8000 and is now distributing electricity to nearly every section of the community. The plant is practically paid for and before long the town must face the expense of some replacements and improvements.

An element in the situation is the need of the town for a new high school building. Some citizens favor the sale of the municipal lighting plant to provide funds.

Roger W. Babson, the noted statistician of Wellesley, speaking at an informal meeting, urged the town not to sell, suggesting a combination with West Boylston, Boylston, Holden, Paxton, Princeton and Shrewsbury, all having municipal plants in the buying of electricity as a unit.

THIS you will understand, dear reader, is an imaginative picture.

Part of it is according to facts. The editor is owned by the Power Trust, and that editor is becoming more and more numerous as power and other corporations buy up newspapers.

However, the Power Trust-owned editor doesn't usually speak as frankly as this.

He doesn't say that the Power Trust owns him.

He only says that it is the duty of the people to be very "liberal" and pay their power bills cheerfully, REALIZING THAT IT IS GOOD FOR NATIONAL PROSPERITY.

It might discourage you unnecessarily to think that the newspaper you are reading, extremely respectable, conservative, etc., etc., is in reality the mouthpiece of a grasping corporation.

Bear in mind, however, that to make a success of anything, including newspaper editing, you have got to understand your business.

And you have got to think in the interest of those from whom you get your money.

When the Power Trust buys editors it is very often like buying a watch without the mainspring. They don't get much.

The police got in touch with William Belven of Rochester, N. LEGISLATIVE HONOR ROLL

REP. ROLAND D. SAWYER of Ware, Fourth Hampshire House District, is another prominent member of the Legislature recently alive to the threat of the big power combine. He is the author of the latest order calling for an investigation of the trust's activities throughout the State. He is a Congregationalist minister and a graduate of Boston University. He serves on the committees on election laws and water supply. He was a member of the Constitutional Convention and a delegate to the Democratic national conventions of 1924 and 1928. He has served his district continuously in the House since 1913. Sawyer also favors the municipal lighting bill now before the Legislature.

REP. WILLIAM J. (BILLY) BARKER of East Boston, widely known entertainer and humorist, is pledged to do his utmost to block the onward sweep of the power trust in this State. He is strong for the municipal light bill as one check on the power interests program. He also is ready to vote for the proposed investigation of the trust's activities. He is a member of the Elks, Eagles and the American Legion. Since 1927 he has been a member of the House of Representatives and at present serves on the committee on banks and banking. He represents the First Suffolk House District. In private life he is a vaudeville manager.

REP. JOSEPH C. WHITE of Jamaica Plain, representing the 19th Suffolk House District, is one of the foremost legislators working for the passage of the municipal lighting bill to protect the cities and towns from the manipulations of the power trust. White is also a strong supporter of the Hagar and McNulty measure for an investigation of the trust activities He is a Democrat, a graduate of Boston College and by occupation a salesman. As a member of the legislative committee on power and light he had much to do with getting a favorable report out of the committee. The redrafted bill which is along the lines of amendments suggested by White. White is a member of the K. of C. American Legion

HUGE STEAL IN 'L' SEEN BY WOHIG

An order calling upon the trustees of the Boston Elevated to submit to the Legislature a list of stockholders who paid more than $100 a share for their stock was filed on Beacon Hill by Representative James J. Twohig of South Boston.

He said that the bill extending public control of the road for 10 years enables a "blind" contract on the people of Metropolitan Boston.

MIGHT COST $1 MILLION.

Under the option clause of the 1918 act, he contends, the State can take the road over at a maximum price of $21,600,000 by assuming the bondage indebtedness.

"This a the greatest steal ever contemplated on the people of any community in this State, and I propose to lay bare the whole contemptible mess," said Representative Twohig.

"The road has been appraised at $142,000,000 and at least $50,000,000 of this value has been poured into it by the fares of the car riders in the last 11 years.

"Messrs. Harriman, Bacon, et al, would give the first preferred $130, the second preferred $115, the preferred $105, and the common as high as $110. These prices are for those assenting, and at these figures, Mr. Harriman admits the price would be $51,700,000 as a minimum.

CHALLENGES CRITICS

"But what about the non-assenting stockholders? How much would they get? What would the maximum be? They admit there is a public ownership bill deferred for a period of years. I challenge any member of the Legislature to tell me how many years or what the actual cost will be under their plan.

"The Legislature is asked to hand to the 64,000 first preferred stockholders at $130 a share, $1,920,000 more than they are entitled to under the 1918 agreement. This means 19,200,000 car riders, 10 cents, or 32,000,000 at a six-cent fare.

"The information asked for in my order is vital as it goes to the very crux of the problem."

ASKS WARRANT FOR HEFLIN

While the Alabama senator was making his speech inside the mail unidentified persons cut the tires of many Klansmen-owned automobiles parked outside.

When he left the hall, under police escort, and climbed into an automobile, someone in the crowd threw an empty "pop" bottle It barely missed Heflin's head, passed beyond, struck Police Sergt.

SENATE RESOLUTION.

A few weeks ago Senator Heflin introduced a weighty resolution into the Senate, referring to the bottle as "a deadly missile" and proposing that the Senate "express its solemn condemnation and repudiation of the reprehensible and criminal conduct" of the Brockton bottle-thrower.

The resolution was blocked almost as soon as introduced, but two days later, on April 24, he went after it again and in a lengthy, ponderous speech demanded that the resolution be adopted.

Republican Senate leaders blocked his efforts again, however, bringing down on their heads the Heflin condemnation.

Then the Alabama Senator turned his guns on his colleagues and the Washington correspondents, forming the latter "squirrel heads."

One such address he made to an empty Senate chamber, all the senators having walked out on him. The gallery was filled with spectators, among whom were a few evident supporters.

On May 1 Heflin succeeded in having a vote taken on his speech, and it was turned down, 69 to 14.

KNOWLTON MUM ON MURDER

Facing the death chair, Frederick Hinman Knowlton, Jr., former proprietor of a battery store in Framingham, discusses automobiles and auto tours through the country but never refers to his own case, officials at Charlestown State Prison said today.

Knowlton is confined in the death house, where he awaits execution the week of May 12 for the slaying of Miss Marguerite Isabelle Stewart, Beverly school teacher, whose body was found by the roadside in Concord.

Prison officials said that the young man spends most of the time smoking and reading magazines and books from the prison library and with conversing with his guards.

Ask Police to End Chimes

Worcester, May 6—Because violence was feared from persons who complained that the ringing of chimes had kept them awake, police rushed extra officers to St. George Assyrian Orthodox Church on Wall st.

The volume of telephone complaints regarding the ringing of the church bells, sounded in observance of Easter and the orthodox calendar became so great that officials on duty feared possible violence from the East Side.

The ringing of the bells was cut short at 1 a. m. by agreement of the pastor, the Rev. Michael Hanson, after he was notified of the complaints.

HOOVER PRAISES 'AL'S' SERVICE TO PUBLIC

New York, May 5—President Hoover praised former Governor Smith, his opponent in the campaign of last fall in a letter read at the formal presentation of the Laetare Medal of the University of Notre Dame to the "Happy Warrior" for distinguished service as a Catholic layman.

Cardinal Hayes pinned the medal on the former Governor following the reading of the President's letter by the Rev. Charles L. O'Donnell, president of the university. Governor Smith was lauded as a "distinguished American" and a "great public servant" by his former opponent.

The President's letter:

HOOVER PRAISES SMITH

"My Dear Dr. O'Donnell—I have your letter of the 22d, informing me that the Laetare Medal from the University of Notre Dame will on the 5th of May be awarded to Governor Alfred E. Smith.

"I am glad you have thus given me the opportunity to join in congratulations to Governor Smith for the honor which you confer upon so distinguished an American and to the university for its public spirit in honoring on great a public servant. Yours faithfully,

HERBERT HOOVER."

The medal was presented at a meeting of the Notre Dame Club of New York, which was attended by members of Mr. Smith's family and by many prominent New Yorkers of various political and religious affiliations.

TITLE TO HONOR ROLL.

Dr. O'Donnell, in presenting the medal said in part: "Sir, this year the University of Notre Dame welcomes you to the historic and distinguished company of her Laetare Medalists. Your title to ennoblement there is found in your long and honorable public career as a statesman, especially in the course of your private life, for both of which alike the soundness and sincerity of your Catholic faith stand out as the moving force and radiant inspiration.

"As a public servant you have been such a one as could bring his record into the sanctity of his home without fear of violating that sanctuary, as a private citizen you could present such a record of domestic fidelity as might be fearlessly exhibited in the market place, or in the hustings, or in the courts of all the world.

"Public life in America is the more honorable for when your character is in the balance it is to go on trial charged with breaking and entering shore cottages here and Bermuda of about $4000 worth of antiques.

U. S. PLAN WINS AT TWO HUB PARLEYS

Elevate Two Boston Priests

By ELIAS McQUAID
Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent
By Cable

Rome, May 6—Official announcement from the Vatican was expected today to confirm the rumored elevation of two Boston priests to the monsignorate. The 250 Boston and New England pilgrims, most of whom are preparing to sail for home tomorrow, were eagerly awaiting the official notification of the honors for the churchmen.

While it was generally accepted that the reports were authentic, that Rev. Francis J. Burke, secretary to Cardinal O'Connell, and Rev. John T. McMahon, pastor of St. Mary's Church, Charlestown, to be advanced to the rank of monsignor, another unofficial report included additional ecclesiastical honors for another Boston priest.

It was that the Very Rev. Francis J. Spellman, attached to the Cardinal's Secretary of State's office, is to be accorded the full title of monsignor, advancing his present rank of domestic prelate.

Cardinal O'Connell and Mgr. Michael J. Splaine were scheduled to leave early this morning for Naples by motor car. The trip of seven hours is planned to allow several visits to ruins en route. Those of the pilgrim party who are not intending to take further tours, will leave tomorrow morning by train. The S. S. Presidents Wilson, which will convey the visitors back to Boston, is prepared to sail Tuesday evening.

BASILICAS VISITED

Final visits to the basilicas of Rome are being made today by the tourists in completing the Holy Year pilgrimage to the Christian shrines.

The cardinal made it known that the Pope had given all of the priests of the pilgrimage the special privilege of imparting his apostolic benediction to their parishioners when they returned. This, he said, was unusual, and illustrated the happiness that the Holy Father had experienced by their visit.

Although the pilgrim party is enthusiastic over the success of their visit to the Eternal City, a pall of sorrow hovers as they prepare to sail homeward. Behind they are leaving the graves of their first grim group, Mrs. Ellen Deheny of North Abington, who died aboard ship, and Louis Ruelle in St. Patrick's Cemetery, Rome, and the body of another, the Rev. Daniel J. Heffernan of Boston, which is being brought back for burial in his native community.

Father Heffernan died of a heart attack in St. Peter's Church, a few hours after achieving his life-long ambition to say mass in that hallowed shrine. He appeared in excellent health and spirits when he went to the basilica to say mass, and told his colleagues that he was fulfilling a lifelong ambition.

COLLAPSES AT VESPERS

He was likewise in fine health during an luncheon given by Cardinal O'Connell, and in the afternoon he visited the North American College with the other pilgrims.

Later he went to vespers in St. Peter's, accompanied by Father Donovan of Natick, Mass., and Father Murphy of Atlantic, Mass. They sat in front of him, and midway through the service they discovered that he had gone into one of the side crypts where he was lying dead.

Think Baby Was Stolen by Woman

Not a child, wishful of a "live doll" to play with, but a grown woman, crazed by yearning to feel baby hands clutching hers, was being sought today by Roxbury police as the kidnaper of Charles Ratzman, Newcome st. infant.

Officers working on the case were convinced that the little Ratzman boy was stolen by some bereaved mother or by some wife without sons or daughters of her own. The culprit, the authorities believe, was probably a person mentally deranged by brooding over the cruelty of fate in denying a baby to her hungry arms.

Yacht Feared Lost Off North Shore

Coast guard boats were searching the waters off Marblehead, Gloucester and Lynn today for a yacht which disappeared after it was sighted about a mile off Phillips Beach at Swampscott.

Possibility that the yacht sank, carrying its occupants to death, was held up today. The craft was sighted by J Howard Edwards, a resident of Phillips Beach, who went into his home to get his binoculars and returned to find the yacht had vanished made to move 1000 women in an adjoining wing.

The men from the right were put in sections remote from the fire.

Starting in the cupola, the fire ate its way down to the fifth story of the right wing, before it was discovered.

Quick work on the part of the institution's fire department and attendants, doctors and nurses prevented injury to any of the inmates in the danger zone. They were marched in orderly fashion to remote sections of the building, although many of them, not realizing the danger they were in, were moved with difficulty. A few yelled in frenzy but were easily controlled by the guards, who marched them, clad in nothing but their night clothes, out of the burning wing.

Not all the patients escaped the hospital in the excitement of the fire. Four were found and brought back after the fire was extinguished. They were found a short distance from the hospital. Two of the four are still missing and a state-wide search for them is under way.

Dr. Marcus Curry, superintendent of the hospital, estimated the damage at $100,000.

The fire departments from Morris Plains, Morris Township and Morristown responded to the calls for aid and about an hour after they arrived it was believed the fire was under control.

FIRE SPREADS

Shortly after, however, the flames succeeded in breaking through the roof in the rear of the wing and John Cullinan, chief of the Morristown fire department, summoned additional apparatus and word was given to the 1,000 women inmates in an adjoining ward, to prepare themselves to leave at a moment's notice and it seemed for a while as if the entire structure would be destroyed.

An aerial ladder, brought from Morristown, aided the firemen greatly in fighting the fire. While it they were able to climb to a sufficient height to get at the flames more effectively and surrounding buildings were watered to prevent their catching fire.

FIREMAN INJURED

Threnchard Dugan, hoseman of the Morristown fire department, suffered a scalp wound when hit by a piece of falling slate, and Theodore Mulchey, of the Morris Township department suffered from smoke. After treatment both went back to the fire.

The main building was opened in 1876 and was originally intended to house 1000 inmates. As early as 1893, however, that number was exceeded and since that time several additions have been added until at the present time there are about 4000 patients housed in the buildings. The distance around the buildings is more than a mile, and while the fire raged, thousands of spectators lined the boundary lines to watch the proceedings.

SOMERVILLE HUSBAND IS ACCUSED

After being married less than five months, Mrs. Merl MacIver of Somerville today sought a divorce from John MacIver in Judge Charles N. Harris' session of Middlesex Probate Court.

Mrs. MacIver, who charged cruelty, said they were married January 1, 1929. On one occasion when she refused to get into an automobile she said her husband pinched her. On another occasion she said he struck her on the shoulders and arms, and on February 10 last struck and slapped her, tore the wedding ring from her finger, said he was all through and left the house, not to return.

WALTHAM WIFE SUES

Mrs. Ida E. Conway of Cherry ave., Waltham, seeking a divorce from John J. Conway, on a charge of cruelty, said he had given her only $20 in four years, and that she had supported their two children.

Mrs. Conway testified that on Oct. 6, 1923, three days after her youngest child was born, her husband refused to get her a drink of water and she was forced to get it herself. Two weeks after the baby was born she said Conway refused to go to a store for her, and when she insisted, struck her and threw her against the bed. In October of 1925 she testified, her husband struck her and said he would love to throw her downstairs.

TWO OTHER CASES

In the same court Mrs. Gertrude H. Elliott of Arlington charged that Thomas H. Elliott, Jr., insisted she go to work shortly after her return from a hospital. When she refused he sold the furniture and decamped. They have four children, two of whom are being cared for by the state and two by relatives.

Mrs. Florence D. Conklin of Dean st., Everett, charged Thomas F. Conklin with desertion. They were married September 17, 1923, at Saranac Lake, N. Y., living for a time in New York city. Her husband would not work so his wife had to, she testified. On December 1, 1923, Conklin left her, she said.

HEIRESS MOTHER WILL STAY IN CHARLESTOWN

WANTS TO LIVE AMONG OLD FRIENDS

Although she has become an heiress, Mrs. Anna Gilmore will not leave Charlestown, where she lives with her husband, Benjamin, and daughter, Doris, at 9 Grant ct., she said today.

Charlestown has been the family home for years, and the fact that she is to inherit a share in the estate of an uncle, amounting to more than half a million dollars, will not make any difference in their place of residence, Mrs. Gilmore said.

The wife of the janitor of the Chelsea Naval Hospital, Mrs. Gilmore will share with eight brothers and sisters in the estate of Edose Paulet, who died recently at Cheboygan, Mich. Paulet, a heavy investor in Canadian iron mines, Standard Oil stock and real estate in Cheboygan, stipulated in his will that he wanted all remaining members of his family to share in his estate.

Prior to her marriage in Woonsocket, Mrs. Gilmore was Miss Anna Paulet, daughter of Mrs. Lea Paulet of 633 Social st., that city. Her father was a brother of Edose Paulet.

Mrs. Gilmore said that while living in Charlestown she has made many friends in the Bunker Hill district, and for that reason will continue to reside there.

With officers of the Central Council of Irish County Associations as special guests, the regular monthly meeting of the County Leitrim Association was held in Sarsfield Hall, Hibernian Building, Roxbury. McKernan presided, a social hour was held. Among those contributing were Michael Stapleton, Patrick O'Rourke, Michael Healey and John P. Leydon.

London Pastor in Pulpit at St. Paul's

Rev. M. P. G. Leonard of All Hallows' Church by the Tower, London, better known as Rev. "Pat" Leonard, co-leader of the "Toc H," the English laymen's religious society, under the patronage of the Prince of Wales, declared that one must share his happiness and spiritual blessings with others, in a sermon at the Cathedral Church of St. Paul.

He asked that the receiving communion be not a "vicious circle" of pew to altar and back to pew, but that it be from pew to altar to one's fellow men and then, and only then, back to pew. The "Toc H" movement, whose message "Padre" Somerset is carrying through New England, started in France during the war and has since spread to Australia, Canada and the United States.

They are alleged to have robbed William Slova of Rochester, N. H., of $17, a watch, fountain pen and ring on the International highway, Revere.

Bova said he lost his way and went into a lunchroom in Chelsea and the three youths offered to show him, two riding with him and the third following in another car, the number plates of which later led to the arrests.

$500,000 FOR LYNN SCHOOL

The petition of Mayor Bauer of Lynn for authority to borrow $500,000 for construction of a senior high school in that city was supported at a hearing today before the legislative committee on municipal finance by Ernest Stevens, superintendent of schools.

He explained that a new high school is needed to adequately house the high school enrollment. The legislature a year ago, he said, authorized an appropriation of $800,000, but the architect decided to build a structure to house 1600 pupils and $1,300,000 will be necessary. There was no opposition.

$25,000 BAIL FOR 3 HELD IN BURGLARIES

Bail of $25,000 each was imposed by Judge Arthur P. Stone in East Cambridge today in the cases of three men charged with looting two safes in that city.

They are James F. King, Radcliffe rd., Somerville; William J. Ferreira, Nashua st., Somerville, and Charles A. Lyman of Colon st., Brighton.

Heavy bail was requested by Capt. Timothy F. Leahy after the men had pleaded not guilty to breaking and entering the plants of Coco Cola Company and the Mama's Baking Company, both in Cambridge, and the larceny of $869 and a watch. They were also charged with having burglars' tools in their possession and with receiving stolen property.

Capt. Leahy said he would present the case to the Grand Jury now in session and Judge Stone granted a continuance to May 13.

Police of Greater Boston were checking over data gathered during the recent epidemic of safe robberies, seeking clues that might implicate the three men.

The arrest of the trio, one of whom was tried in connection with the shooting of two Boston policemen in 1924, resulted from the alertness of two young patrolmen attached to the East Cambridge station.

MICE SHOW WAY TO HAVE GOOD, WHITE TEETH

There will be no poor teeth if the product of an exhibitor at the Massachusetts Dental Society's convention at the Hotel Statler is as good as it looks. The exhibitor has two white rats in cages, which are used for experimentation of a cod liver oil product.

The oil is claimed to build firm teeth, and the rats show its vitamine strength by having one-twelfth of a drop a day fed to them. This ration brings the half-starved rats back to health, and the oil is supposed to work upon the human body, particularly the teeth, in the same manner.

The exhibitor has a large wooden tooth on display, which is painted white.

SINCLAIR MAY MAKE BRICKS

Washington, May 6 (INS)—The red tape necessary to induct Harry F. Sinclair into prison began to unwind rapidly today.

Just when the doors of the jail house clang behind the multi-millionaire oil magnate and sportsman has not been fixed. It may be late today, more probably tomorrow, and certainly not later than Wednesday.

Sinclair's attorneys have notified district officials he will come to Washington to give himself up, and with as good grace as is possible to begin his 90-day stretch for refusing to answer questions of the Senate in its Teapot Dome oil investigation.

It seemed fairly certain today that the place of commitment will be the District of Columbia jail, instead of the more distant work farm at Occoquan, Va.

The city jail is more desirable than the work farm in some respects, and less desirable in others. Physically able prisoners sent to the farm are put to work—hard manual labor. There are cows to be milked, fields to be plowed, stables to be cleaned, and worse than all else, bricks to be made in the factory on the farm.

In the city jail, the prisoners don't, but it is work of lighter variety. There is the prison laundry, the office, and the cells and corridors the place of confinement

Ousted Cop Proves He's Citizen, May Get Job

Providence, May 6—Somebody's blunder in the city solicitor's office threw former Patrolman George D. Schultz out of a job last October, but three federal departments have now adjudged him a citizen of the United States.

Schultz, who since has been living a hand-to-mouth existence as a part-time mill hand, probably will seek reinstatement as a policeman and back pay for seven months—a neat little sum of more than $1000.

He was ousted when the city solicitor's office informed the police commissioners he was not a citizen because he had been courageous enough to enlist in the Canadian army at the outbreak of the war.

Both his parents were born in Maine and Schultz himself was born in Nova Scotia.

Despite his protests, the city solicitor's office ruled that even though born of American parents, which made him an American citizen, Schultz had forfeited his citizenship by his enlistment.

However, the Bureau of Immigration, the U. S. Bureau of Naturalization and the Department of State have all overturned the strange decision, and as documentary proof of Schultz's citizenship, he has been issued a courtesy passport.

GIRL AND BOY ARE AWARDED FLAG MEDALS

Pearl N. Guenther, 64 Myrtle ave., Webster, Mass., and Theodore K. Leutz, 284 South Huntington ave., Jamaica Plain, were declared the girl and boy flag champions at the public exercises held by the Flag Board Contest at Large, at the State House.

"Honorable Mentions" were awarded to Beatrice Bowdy of 20 Cotton st., Roslindale; Janette Smith, Pepperell, Mass.; John James O'Neil, of 13 Beech st., Woodsville, New Hampshire, and Clinton W. Tyler, of 53a Bigelow rd., West Newton.

The exercises were held under the supervision of George L. McDermott, chairman of the Contest Board and American officer of the Suffolk County Council, American Legion.

SALUTE OLD GLORY

The exercises opened with presentation of colors and a hand salute to "Old Glory." Chairman McDermott welcomed the contestants to the State House and announced to them the manner in which their recitations would be marked. Then followed the recitations, the girls first, then the boys.

The assumed names of the contestants were called so as to avoid any possible recognition by any member of the audience or the judges, who, by the way, were entirely ignorant of the real names of the contestants taking part. After the recitations had been completed, the juries of award retired to another chamber, where their markings were compiled. Following this, the juries returned to the auditorium where the announcement of the winners was made.

HUNDREDS IN TEST

The Flag Contest Board at Large, of which Mr. McDermott was chairman, was instituted to allow the many hundreds of boys and girls residing in the New England States to participate in the first annual flag contest of the United States Flag Association, which is sponsored by the Hearst newspapers throughout the United States.

When the announcement of awards were made, Miss Guenther in a spirit of patriotism warmly congratulated her co-winner by shaking his hand. Following the cordial greetings between the boy and girl flag champions Miss Guenther, next though of her mother who was in New York, she rushed to a telegraph station, and sent the glad news.

The awarding of the "Old Glory" medals to the boy and girl flag champions of this unit, means that they now have qualified for the regional contest which is to be held next week.

The judges in the contest were, George L. McDermott, P. Leonard, W. J. McWhinney, Mrs. L. T. McDermott, Miss L. Fhippard and Miss R. Galvin.

TORCH SLAYER WITNESS IS RELEASED

White Plains, N. Y., May 6 (INS)—Eugene Bussey, the 24-year-old Baltimore collegian, who admitted taking part in "necking parties" with Dorothy Peacox, slain bride of Earle Peacox, who confessed her murder, today was released from jail, where he had been held as a material witness.

A temporary writ of habeas corpus, signed by Justice William F. Blakely, and confirmed by Supreme Court Justice Arthur S. Tompkins, held Bussey's arrest illegal.

The formal indictment of Peacox for the strangling and burning the body of his wife was expected today or tomorrow as the May Grand Jury was sworn in today.

Sun Hides Face at Manila Thursday

Manila, May 6—The greatest group of astronomers ever to come to the Philippines are in the central islands of the archipelago to observe the total eclipse of the sun Thursday.

Two groups of scientists from the United States, one from Germany, and one from the Manila observatory have established stations from which to view the phenomenon. The groups from abroad came half way around the world, bringing with them tons of instruments at a cost of thousands of dollars, on a chance that the sky would be clear when the eclipse occurred.

They were informed by the local weather bureau that the eclipse would take place at the beginning of the rainy season, and that there was but half a chance that clear weather would prevail. But of so great importance do they consider this chance to study the sun's corona during a total eclipse, that they chose to gamble with the weather. If the sky is cloudy the extensive preparations which they have made will have been for naught.

The corona which the scientists are to study is that little known body which surrounds the sun. Although it is present at all times, it cannot be seen except during an eclipse because of the sun's bright ness.

Scientists are intensely interested in the corona because they feel that a further study of it might reveal the secrets of the atom and the ultimate structure of the universe.

HAVOC IN PATH OF N. H. STORM; FLOOD FEARED

were fast swelling the Mohawk to the danger point again, this morning, but Colebrook citizens, watching the water swirl nearer and nearer to the wreckage left previously in its wake, had a worse worry than the rampaging stream alone.

A few miles up river, the big dam at Lake Gloriette was reported to be weakening rapidly. That cement barrier, should it fail, would let loose on the helpless town below it a deluge more frightful even than the one which caused the destruction not yet repaired.

Colebrook saw in the Lake Gloriette threat the possibility of complete extinction. The community today was in no position to withstand further catastrophe. Dozens of dwellings lay hopelessly demolished. Flood ruins were everywhere.

The Red Cross, the State, and local groups of volunteer workers had hardly outlined the work needing to be begun at once. With outlying settlements still isolated, the specter of disease was stalking abroad and health authorities were checking up serums and anti-toxins in anticipation of emergency.

Nevertheless, the labor of repairing past ravages had to be interrupted to guard against the future. Sentries were posted to keep tabs on the rise of the river and others were appointed to remain in touch with Lake Gloriette by telephone. Preparations were completed for a general evacuation of the town.

In Greater Boston, high winds and freakish rain squalls had left their mark behind them. One man was blown from a steamship and was drowned in Boston Harbor. The victim was Michael Breen, 60, a fireman on the Calvin Austin. Property damage was heavy throughout Massachusetts.

"I'll never invite you again"
Yet, to be polite,
SHE SAID:
"It's nice to have you here, Ruth"

Charming—yet Ruth is so unwelcome

. . . can it be "B. O."?
(Body Odor)

"I DID enjoy Alice Cole's bridge," Ruth was thinking some weeks later. "But she's never asked me again.

"Same old story—people like me at first—but quickly lose interest."

Then Ruth began to suspect the trouble. Read what she learned about "B. O."

"I'd never believe a person could be guilty of body odor—and not know it—except that it happened to me.

"B. O." fools us like that, my doctor explained, because we become insensitive to familiar odors. But even on cool days the pores give off as much as a quart of odor-causing waste.

"Now, thanks to Lifebuoy, I never worry about offending. Its wonderful antiseptic lather is so purifying, you feel 'like a million dollars' after a Lifebuoy bath. Lifebuoy even removes cigarette odors from the hands, my brother says."

Perfectly marvelous values, and perfectly stunning hats—so becoming! They come in all the popular shades, exceptionally fine horsehair that would ordinarily cost $8 to $10. There are close fitting flare-backs, and long-dipping backs, and some drooping models, laces trimmed, that allow the sun to shine through so flatteringly. You'll adore them! And they are only $3.95! There are some beautiful vises and handkerchief felt combinations reduced to $3.95 that are rare bargains. Perky little styles in visca cloth are reduced to $2.95. "Varicose Veins" take all the joy out of Springtime for me," complains Ethel, because I suffer so, and can't wear the sheer stockings I adore. Then why not try Dr. Saul's elastic stocking, which conceals all these blemishes, and reduces painful swelling. It is most invisible, lightest summer weight, seamless, and with knitted-in heel. You may order by mail, price $6.75 each. An elastic knee cap, price $4.00, reduces flabby knees and takes the pain out of stiffened ones. His fitted-to-measure arch support shoes, priced $8.50, come in all new styles. To Dr. Saul, then, 110 Tremont St., Rm. 312, for corns, callouses and all foot troubles.

Ummh! Macaroons!

Once upon a time there sauntered along a famous Boardwalk a gentleman, who detected sniffs of delicious baking mingling with the tang of the salt sea air. Another sniff proved that certain something to be delectable macaroons, rich, golden, at 90 cents a dozen. But wait! this gentleman had a store of his own, and knowing his customers' weakness, he got the recipe, the ovens, and the chef — and now offers these toothsome Golden Almond Macaroons, double size, in Gilchrist's (street floor) for 50 cents a dozen; 25 cents half dozen, and 5 cents for one in a glassine bag. Fresh daily. This gentleman even ships to Egypt. One might say he knew his macaroons!

Beauty Thrives

where beauty lies! And in Sayli's charming Parisian Salon, you simply can't help but become beautiful, for Mr. Sayli excels in all beauty culture, and is especially successful in permanent waving, giving deep, loose waves that cling to the head in lovely contour. His charge is only $8 for the Frederics Vita-Tonic, every wave is given by him, or with his assistance. I met a smartly-dressed friend of mine there today, having a manicure by Miss Portal (formerly with a large department store). Sayli's oil facials for dry skin are marvelous. 46 West St., Rm. 302. Lib. 0190.

This Is a Tale of a dear friend of mine who knew the art of making smart hats, but found that in order to sell them she must retain her youthful appearance—and that gray hairs were lessening her appeal. She didn't want to use a dye, and was delighted when I told her about Ann J. McHale's Hair Color Restorer, which is an exceptional preparation that does not dye, but restores the rich brown color to streaked or faded locks. It is positively safe to use, and very effective. It is sold at S. S. Pierce Co., 59 Tremont St. for $1 a bottle. Just the thing for you if your first gray hairs are beginning to appear.

"And the Bride Received—many beautiful gifts of pewter." No, my Anne, this is not a time-worn clipping from paper of Ye Colonial Days, but a modern society editor's report on one of the season's smartest weddings. And the sweet little bride who received these lovely gifts of pewter was simply thrilled, for not only is it the smart thing in modern decorations, but also very useful, and pewter, like sterling silver, lasts a lifetime. It can be kept highly polished, or allowed to darken, like the famous antique designs in the Museums from which it is copied. Filene's Gift Shop (first floor) has had so many requests for modern pewter for wedding gifts that they have stocked up with a wonderful selection of Paul Revere Pewter, in all the famous antique designs, surprisingly moderate in price. A tea service of four pieces is priced $18.50, water pitcher with tray, $10. A candlestick, $5; salt and pepper shakers, $3; ash trays, $2, also vegetable dishes and serving platters. There are also some very attractive dishes of hand-hammered pewter in exotic modernistic designs—for the modern-minded. Here are gifts, conveniently priced, that practically every piece can be matched in design at Filene's Gift Shop.

A Fur Scarf—of Course!

Maybe even two—and be doubly smart! You can surely afford them at Scott's—New England's Largest Fur Establishment, because, as usual they have been unerring in their choice of scarfs, and have one of the largest and most complete selections in New England, priced $15 and up to $295. Scott's extend their economical payment plan for the purchasing of their scarfs, and if you do not wish to pay cash, you may open a 30, 60, 90 day charge account, or join the Unique Fur Club, and make small weekly or monthly payments while wearing your scarf. Your fur coat will be safe from the ravages of moths, burglars or fire, if you send it to Scott's for safe keeping. They give prompt call and delivery service, and have a large, efficient workshop, which is equipped to do all sorts of repairing and remodelling at reasonable prices. Better have your repairing done now, as it is less expensive than in the Fall when they are rushed with orders. Scott's Furriers remain open every Saturday until 9 o'clock. 69 Summer St., Boston, and 51 Pratt St., Hartford, Ct.

Bridge—the Great Outdoor Sport!

You are no longer in style if you make your Grand Slam while toasting yourself and your friends by the side of your crackling fireplace, for bridge has become an outdoor game. The popular hostess now invites her guests into the garden, with sunlight dappling the cool lawn, just as it does in R. H. White's beautiful Garden Home, where bridge tables have been arranged on the soft green, accompanied by folding camp chairs (with backs) covered with brightly striped canvas. Each table is complete with gay little tallies and scores, priced 35 to 59 cents. Playing cards, the smartest "We-They" brand, are priced $1.50 a set. New multi-colored cards in modernistic design are $1.30 for two. Trump indicators are priced 50 cents and $1.35. Red pack elephants trundling cigarettes are 95 cents. To spur on the most indifferent player are prizes of small desk waste baskets, $1.00 and $1.75; trinket boxes, $1.25; Spirex glass cream and sugar sets, $1.75 and $2.50; lacquer card boxes, $5.50. On another table in tempting array the refreshment service is displayed. A beautiful Royal Blue Glass luncheon set, priced $10. Lemonade sets, green and rose colored, are priced $5 to $8. If you have a bridge-going parent, I'm sure she would be delighted with a Mother's Day Gift from the delightful Bridge Garden Party in R. H. White's.

Figure Beautifiers

Oh, the comfort and perfect fit of a Caporn custom made Combination. It stays "put." Made WITHOUT ELASTIC WEB-BING (elastic stretches, allowing the figure to "spread"). Many potentially good figures through wearing incorrect foundation garments are ruined. The Caporn Combination corrects wrong posture. By means of the adjustable lacings on each side the figure can be confined within slenderizing lines. It is easily laundered. Removable shoulder straps, garters and bones. Mail orders filled. Send for self-measurement form, but if in town call and see demonstration forms. Caporn, 367 Boylston St., near Arlington (Ken. 4230).

When Summer Comes

and you enjoy the glorious freedom of the great outdoors—swimming in a sun-back bathing suit, and dancing in a low-cut summery gown, you'll also want to enjoy a freedom from unlovely superfluous hairs. So better make your appointment now with Miss Elizabeth Sparkes, Rm. 602, 120 Tremont St., because she has a special machine for removing the hairy growth from the arms. She also has unusual success in clearing the lips and chin of this disturbance—painlessly and permanently, leaving no traces. Miss Sparkes is an expert, sure and confident. Tel. Han. 7592.

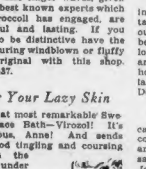
Would You Like to see how your permanent waves or new bob will look—before it is done? Then go to the Hollywood Bobbing Shop, 110 Tremont St., where there are living models. This famous shop gives all the popular permanent waves, including Nestle, Eugene, Frederics, Edmonds and Frigidene, using the method best suited to you. They have remarkable success with bleached or dyed hair, and with white hair—the highest perfection. Marcel and finger waves, given by the best known experts which Mr. Troccoli has engaged, are beautiful and lasting. If you want to be distinctive have the new alluring windblown or fluffy bob, original with this shop. Cap. 6457.



Stir Your Lazy Skin

with that most remarkable Swedish Face Bath—Virozol! It's marvelous, Anne! And sends the blood tingling and coursing through the veins under your skin—stimulating—revitalizing. It cleanses the skin thoroughly, purifying the pores of blackheads and impurities. It tightens the muscles, prevents sagging, and arrests the formation of wrinkles. Virozol is the ideal cleansing astringent, and can be used in place of soap and water. It was awarded the Grand Prize with Gold Medal at the 1928 Exposition in Paris. It is priced $1.25 a bottle, and sold by Filene's, and all department stores and beauty shops.

Plums of Value!

Like Jack Horner's famous pie, Evelyn's famous Dress Shop is bursting with good things to wear—not eat—real plums of value in the new Spring things, and some advance summery ones. Tweed ensembles with tuck-in blouses, and some with print dresses. Sweet, flowery chiffons (silk slips) and gorgeous, gay taffeta evening gowns, the smartest prints and flat crepes. A polka dot, with deep cape collar, tagged $9.50 truly surprised me, and so did the popular prints, full-length ensembles, flowered chiffons and georgettes that you'd really expect would cost $15 at least. Transparent velvet coats in black only, $12.85 up. Evelyn's Dress Shop, 9 Winter St.

Here's a Magic Balm

for you if your hair is beginning to fade and lose its lustre. It's Dirigo Hair Balm, a marvelous discovery that restores faded hair to its original color and sheen, although it is not a dye, and contains no chemicals. It has no effect that fades hair. Only live, growing hair responds to it. Dirigo at the same time positively stops all scalp irritations, corrects oily or dry conditions, and restores the hair to a normal, healthy growth. You apply it yourself with the tips of your fingers. It is priced $1.25 a bottle. You may order by mail. If you wish to see it demonstrated, drop in to the shop of Vera Burge, 59 Temple Place, Rm. 806. The results are amazing.

Dew-Kissed!

Then faintly tinted by Dawn! That is how I always think of Doris' complexion—a reputation she has gained by her fidelity to Komplex Facials, which Gilchrist's Beauty Shop give so well. They cleanse the skin thoroughly, firm sagging muscles by tightening the pores, and give a fresh, glowing "finish." They are so refreshing. Try one if you are tired and nervous, price $2. Gilchrist permanent waves are specially priced at $10, and are gentle ripples and tiny tendrils of lasting loveliness. Inector Notox, the wonderful hair dye which cannot be detected, is also given most successfully at Gilchrist's.

Answering a New Demand

come colorful, sunfast fabrics to Jordan Marsh Company (annex eighth floor). Gay, vivid, exotic, this material is of durable weight, and guaranteed washable. It is priced from 75 cents to $1.50 a yard. Made in the Mexican manner, with colorful tropical flower and strange old Indian designs lending inspiration it promises to take a prominent place under our summer sun for stunning beach coats, auto robes, men's lounging jackets, beach bags, and all sorts of things for the home, which the "handy" little lady will see in the Upholstery Dept.

Personal Daintiness can be maintained easily and comfortably at all times if you are careful in the choice of a sanitary protection. Mayer Jonasson & Co. has an exceptionally fine one, which is made exclusively for them. It is Celleen, and made of the softest material possible. There is no irritating discomfiture with Celleen, and it is thoroughly absorbent. It is easily disposed and completely deodorizing. Celleen is newly-fashioned for comfort, and affords personal easiness and security. It is sold at the Toilet Goods Section in one dozen size packages at 2? cents, or four packages for $1.00.

Most of the Girls at Doris' party were wearing Miller's dresses. I knew it the instant I saw them, as they looked so smart, and utterly "different." Helen let out the secret that they had taken advantage of Miller's great reduction sale, where prints of the freshest Spring-time design are reduced from $15 to $11.50. One of the most attractive frocks was from the special lot of brand new designs in crepes, prints, georgettes, special value at $15.00. Another group of crepe and georgettes, dresses and ensembles are reduced from $25.00 to $16.50, extraordinary values at Miller's, 2nd floor, 26 West St., over the Coward Shoe.

Presenting Mme. Boucher

In a bower of flowers, on her opening day, I found her, Anne, the charming Mme. Boucher who has just opened her lovely Salon de Beaute at 41 Winter St. Sunny, and high above the bustle and bustle of the street, it is a delightful "home" of beauty, where a trained nurse excels in hair dyeing and scalp treatments, and expert beauticians give the most desired permanent waves at $10, $12, and $15 and special oil treatment. You will instantly feel "at home" there and long for your appointment time to come, so that you may enjoy Mme. Boucher's irresistible hospitality. Lib. 3083.

If You Are Not Slim

and find it hard to get fitted to dresses and coats smartly—youthfully—and economically—Lane's, at 26 West St. (2nd floor) will be a haven for you. They specialize in little women's apparel from size 14½ to 24½, and in larger women's from 24½ to 60! In perfectly stunning styles giving a trim, well-poised appearance to the larger figure. Ensembles, prints, georgette frocks with soft lace bibots; sun-tan georgettes with lace cocktail jackets, flowered chiffons, and new summery wash dresses and ensembles are wonderful values at $16.75 up. And by the way, Lane's could solve the problem of that Mother's Day Gift.

Everyone Is Speaking of the vast improvement in Helen's hair since she has been using Hairlene—that Universal Scalp Remedy, which is a fierce enemy of dandruff and unhealthy hair conditions. Hairlene contains no alcohol, an ingredient that so many people object to in a hair tonic. It is guaranteed to stimulate the scalp, overcome dry, or oiliness, and promote an improved growth of hair. It contains only the finest oils and herbs, and if your hair is already thick and healthy, it will preserve its beauty. Hairlene is sold by the Hairlene Laboratory, 8 Winter St. Price $1.00 a bottle. You may order by mail.

May Blossoms

are peeking out—a sure sign that the hatless season is on—when the only covering the smart young miss will wear on her head is a pert little curly bob. Of course for safety it must be permanently waved—and Lillian Cunningham, 561 Boylston St., is the one to do it. She offers you a choice of Frederics, Eugene, Nestle or Bonat Methods—at the very agreeable price of $10. Your wave can be wide, loose, or alluring Mae Murray curls—all wrapped for ringlet ends. Every wave is guaranteed, and given under Miss Cunningham's direct supervision. For appointment call Back Bay 9069.

Devotedly yours,

Priscilla

BERLIN SEEKS RIGHT TO HALT PAYMENTS

Paris, May 6 (INS)—Germany's right to economic protection is expected to be the feature of the reparation discussions late this afternoon.

It was understood that Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, chief of the German delegation, would inform the allied experts that Germany makes it a condition she should have the right to suspend reparation payments and demand an investigation of her capacity to pay, if the country feels herself unable to meet her obligations.

This reservation is expected to be offered in connection with formal announcement that Germany agrees with the general settlement plan proposed by Chairman Owen D. Young, American delegate.

5000 CHILDREN ATTEND THE FIRST MEETING OF LINDBERGH CLUB

MODEL PLANES CLOUD 'SKY' OF ELKS HOTEL BALLROOM

Five thousand boys and girls of the Boston American Lindbergh Club—and there were almost as many girls as there were boys—gathered in the beautiful ballroom of the Elks' Hotel, Tremont st., for the first meeting and demonstration of model planes.

It was one merry crowd of youngsters that cheered the little planes as they sailed through the air, striking the high ceiling of the ballroom and gliding down to the balcony and onto the ballroom floor.

The big treat came at the close of the demonstration, when 5000 Necco Need-Ums donated by the New England Confectionary Co. and a like number of ice cream "Bunnies," donated by the Turner Center System, were distributed to the boys and girls as they left the hotel.

These youngsters now have a better idea of what these famous New England products are. The Need-Ums, a chocolate-covered cocoanut bar, is produced in the modern Necco plant where more than 500 different kinds of candy are made from the smallest penny goods to the most complete fancy packages of chocolates. An invitation has been extended by the candy manufacturers to the boys and girls of the Boston American Lindbergh Club to visit the plant. But each member must be accompanied by an adult.

And how the Lindbergh club boys and girls "went in" for the ice cream Bunnies! The Turner Center System Ice Cream Bunnies are made under the most sanitary conditions. Every care is taken to make the ice cream of as fine a quality as can be bought.

GATHERED EARLY

A crowd of boys and girls gathered in front of the Elks Hotel at least an hour before our meeting was scheduled to begin. Alice Finn, 11, of 10 Hyde Park ave, Hyde Park, was the first to arrive. Alice was at the hotel at 8:30 a. m.

Our meeting was a wonderful success. Kieran J. Lowry, manager of the Elks Hotel, who gave the use of the ballroom to the club for its first meeting and demonstration of model flying, addressed the boys and girls and complimented them on their club. He said there was no doubt that the club would be a wonderful success. W. Duncan Russell, director of the Girl Scouts Department of the Community Service told of the cooperation of his organization with the Boston American Lindbergh Club's model airplane building classes.

Frank J. Tonis, an expert in model airplane building gave a talk on the various kinds of planes which have been published in the Boston Evening American. He demonstrated the various models and staged some exciting flights of these little planes. Jack English, the Boston Evening American, who has charge of the meetings and events of the Lindbergh Club, explained the object of the club in detail to the boys and girls and told how Col. Lindbergh had requested personally that the pennies collected from the members as dues be donated to a children's hospital. This announcement brought loud cheering.

MEMBERS ENTERTAIN

Billy McGowan, a member of the Lindbergh Club, entertained with a number of songs and dances. Blanche M. Tracey was at the piano.

Now, boys and girls, our next big event—and it will be a big event—will be staged May 21, between 4 and 6 p. m. It will be a Lindy Day celebration, to mark the second anniversary of Col. Lindbergh's flight from New York to Paris. We will announce the place and a real surprise for this event in a few days. Watch the Boston Evening American for full particulars. You must not miss this.

Following close on this event will be the model plane meet in the Boston Arena on May 25. Full particulars on this event will be published soon in the Boston Evening American.

We again warn you to be careful in writing your full name and address when you apply for membership in our club. Many letters have been returned to us containing membership cards and buttons, as well as tickets to B. F. Keith's Theater in Boston, because of incorrect addresses. Write clearly, or, better still, print your name and address, so that there will be no mistakes.

SEND IN PHOTOS

If you have a good clear photo of yourself send it to the Editor of the Boston Evening American Lindbergh Club, P. O. box 185, Boston, Mass. We will print pictures of our club members from time to time. Be sure to write your name and address on the back of each photo.

Don't forget that trip to Washington. Are you going to be one of 12 boys and girls to make it? All you have to do is to follow the instructions in the essay on "What Lindy Means to Me." The 12 boys and girls, six between 8 and 13, and six between 13 and 18, who write the best essays, will enjoy a trip to the nation's capital next month. The winning essays will be judged by a board of judges composed of at least five prominent citizens. Be sure to write your name, age, and address on your essay.

The deadline for your essay will be midnight, May 22. So don't delay until it is too late to send in your essay.

Address all letters to Editor, Boston Evening American Lindbergh Club, P. O. Box 185, Boston, Mass.

Happy Kiddies Make Merry — At First Meeting of Club

Part of the 5000 boys and girls, everyone a member of the Boston American Lindbergh Club. The staff photographer had a hard time to find a place on the ballroom floor of the Elks Hotel to set up his camera. The first meeting of the club featured demonstrations of model airplane flying.

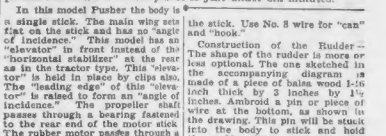
Pusher Plane Nearly Ready for Takeoff

By FRANK J. TONIS

Model Airplane Expert of Community Service, Inc., of Boston

Indoor endurance planes give the model maker some of the greatest thrills he can receive. The builder who can see his ships climb 50 or more feet and sail in graceful circles for more than a minute is having fun. If he studies his planes and works carefully his reward will be flights of increased duration. The present record for indoor planes is just under six minutes.

In this model Pusher the body is a single stick. The main wing sets flat on the stick and has no "angle of incidence." This model has an "elevator" in front instead of the "horizontal stabilizer" at the rear as in the tractor type. This "elevator" is held in place by clips also. The "leading edge" of this "elevator" is raised to form an "angle of incidence." The propeller shaft passes through a bearing fastened to the rear end of the motor stick. The rubber motor passes through a "can" (fastened under the fuselage stick) on its way from the propeller to the hook at the front. The cut away section of the prop is toward the rear—the shaft being passed through from the opposite side in the tractor propeller—SEE drawing below.

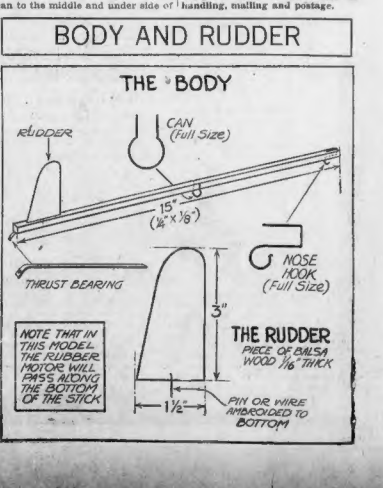


Construction of the fuselage—Finish a piece of balsa wood to these dimensions: 15 inches by ½ by ¼ inches. Ambroid the nose hook to one end. Ambroid the bearing to the other end. Ambroid the can to the middle and under side of the stick. Use No. 8 wire for "can" and "hook."

Construction of the Rudder—The shape of the rudder is more or less optional. The one sketched in the accompanying diagram is made of a piece of balsa wood 1-16 inch thick by 3 inches by 1½ inches. Ambroid a pin or piece of wire at the bottom, as shown in the drawing. This pin will be stuck into the body to stick and hold the rudder firm.

In tomorrow's Boston Evening American will be full instructions on how to construct the wing and elevator.

Any boy or girl who desires to make the Endurance Pusher Plane described by Tonis can obtain complete kit or parts from the Community Service, Inc., of Boston, 720 Boylston st., room 202. The kits will be sold at cost. The price is 65 cents. Mail orders will be 10 cents extra or a total of 75 cents. The extra 10 cents to cover cost of handling, mailing and postage.



FARM AND GARDEN SALE AT CHESTNUT HILL OFFERS LURE TO LEADERS OF THE SMART SET

Rare Plants Will Be Shown at Mrs. E. S. Webster's Estate

"TEMPERAMENTAL AS A GRAND OPERA STAR," quoth the garden enthusiast, squinting a weather eye at May skies and a doleful look at drenched grounds. For as spring sunshine waxes stronger the planting fever seizes grand dame and youthful gardener alike patrician fingers fairly itch to play at this fascinating game with nature. To these the announcement of the annual plant sale of the Farm and Garden Shop at Mrs. Edwin S. Webster's lovely Chestnut Hill estate on the list is like the trumpet call to the old war horse.

ESPECIALLY WHEN WORD passes around that rare plants for rock gardens from the private places of such famous horticulturists as Mrs. Albert C. Burrage and Mrs. Clement S. Houghton will be offered does this date become important and an event not to be missed. Many plant aristocrats, not to be procured elsewhere, will be on sale and hardy perennials and seedlings, garden tools and accessories of every sort and description.

WHEN SUCH NAMES AS Mrs. David C. Colt, Mrs. Horace Frazer, Mrs. Charles E. Cotting, Mrs. George U. Crocker, Mrs. Henry Harris, Mrs. Walter G. Reser, Mrs. Jack Ramsey and Mrs. Houghton are on the director's list one is assured that really fine plants are going to find new habitats after this sale and tea.

MRS. QUINCY ADAMS SHAW, Mrs. A. C. Burrage, Mrs. Robert C. Morse, Mrs. George S. West, Mrs. Chandler E. Hovey, Miss Helen Gould and Miss Lee Hyde are assisting, also Mrs. Bramwell Baker of Chestnut Hill Horticultural Club, Mrs. H. B. Stowell, Mrs Sewell Cabot, Mrs. Florence Bullman, Mrs. Charles G. Mixter, Mrs. H. V. Greenough, Mrs. W. K. Jackson, Mrs. Romney Spring, Mrs. Roger Hatch and Mrs. Irving Wright. An additional feature this year will be a table of picnic accessories.

BETWEEN CLOSING TOWN houses and opening country ones, society pauses to lend her presence to several worthy causes this week. Chief among them is the second annual musicale tomorrow afternoon at the Charlotte Cushman Club, where Mrs. Edith Bond Stearns and Mrs. M. L. Lawrence Higgins will preside at the tea urn following the program. Patronesses just added to the already imposing list include Mrs. Arthur H. Moor, Mrs. Luther R. Nash, Mrs. R. Elmer Townsend, Mrs. E. F. Greene, Mrs. Frederick G. Hall, Mrs. Edward Gray.

EVERY DAY THE NORTH Shore population increases, swelled by Boston's smart set and important visitors from many other points. This week, Mrs. Eliot Wadsworth opens her "Villa La Tomia" at Gloucester, and Mr. and Mrs. Edwin S. Boardman will leave the Hotel Puritan for their cottage at Marblehead Neck. The Alligator, Mr. Boardman's boat, will be moored as usual at Marblehead this summer.

Mrs. Francis Lee Higginson will be surrounded by a house full of young folk all summer after opening "Old Fort" the first of June, when she exchanges the magnificent view from her Fifth Carlton winter suite for the seclusion of Paine place, at Prides Crossing. George Higginson, 2d, and his bride of last December, the former Virginia Oakes, will be in the group. Mr. and Mrs. George H. Lyman, Jr., (Eleanor Higginson) and their three daughters, Anne, Eleanor and Lorraine, will be with Mrs. Higginson all summer, and another daughter Mrs. Bernard R. Rogers (Corina Higginson) with her two daughters, Corina and Adela, will come on from Lake Forest, Ill., for July.

MRS. MARSHALL FIELD OF Washington is to occupy the Pierce estate at Prides Crossing, while the Eben Richards, who usually spend part of the summer there, are to remain in Tuxedo Park, N. Y. Mr. and Mrs. Stuart B. Kaiser (Minnie Richards) of Cambridge will spend the summer abroad. Col. and Mrs. Edward M. House of New York are to return to their favorite summering spot at Manchester, on the Lane estate, the first of June. Their daughter, Mrs. Randolph Tucker (Mona House) has her country home in Wenham.

JUNIOR LEAGUE RANKS are to be depleted by one more miss in the fall when Miss Margaret Hitchcock Sims will become Mrs. Robert Holbrook Hopkins. Their engagement has just been announced by Rear-Admiral and Mrs. William S. Sims of Beacon st. Another June bride is to be added to the list when the wedding of Miss Eileen Elizabeth Park, daughter of President J. Edgar Park of Wheaton College, and Mrs. Park, and Richard W. Howell of Framingham takes place.

REAL FRO-JOY ICE CREAM

in a cup 5¢

CROWD around while I whistle the patter on a swell new stunt. A nickel is all it's gonna cost now to get the most elegant ice cream that ever slid over a regular guy's tongue. I've fixed it up with the Fro-joy fellers to put it in cups with my picture on 'em, so you can't go wrong. And every friend of mine is goin' to collect the lids, that have different pictures of me with Uncle Louie's Nephew and a bunch of other straight little shooters. Grab a nickel off of somebody quick, and hunt up a store that sells 'em.

Yours for less belittlin',

Skippy

Show this to Mother and Dad

We hope you'll like the idea behind Fro-joy Skippy Cups. Fro-joy is the purest and most nourishing ice cream money can buy. It is richer in vitamins, phosphorus, calcium, and soluble iron, the things that make healthy children healthier. So now you can feel more confident that your youngsters will spend their nickels on wholesome food. They'll prefer ice cream in Skippy Cups, which guard the purity of Fro-joy right up to the moment of eating. That's because Skippy is the most lovable little boy in America's comics. General Ice Cream Corporation.

COOLIDGE GIVES REASONS FOR HIS REFUSAL TO BE CANDIDATE

INTIMATE PICTURE HOW HIS MIND FUNCTIONED THEN

for a President, yet I do not think that the practice applies to one who has succeeded to part of a term as vice-president. Others might argue that it does, but I doubt if the country would so consider it.

Although my own health has been practically perfect, yet the duties are very great and ten years would be a very heavy strain. It would be especially long for the mistress of the White House. Mrs. Coolidge has been in more than usual good health, but I doubt if she could have stayed there for ten years without some danger of impairment of her strength.

A President should not only not be selfish, but he ought to avoid the appearance of selfishness. The people would not have confidence in a man that appeared to be grasping for office.

It is difficult for men in high office to avoid the malady of self-delusion. They are always surrounded by worshippers. They are constantly, and for the most part sincerely, assured of their greatness.

They live in an artificial atmosphere of adulation and exaltation which sooner or later impairs their judgment. They are in grave danger of becoming careless and arrogant.

The chances of having wise and faithful public service are increased by a change in the Presidential office after a moderate length of time.

It is necessary for the head of the nation to differ with many people who are honest in their opinions. As his term progresses, the number who are disappointed accumulates. Finally, there is so large a body who have lost confidence in him that he meets a rising opposition which makes his efforts less effective.

To New Problems
Ex-Presidents Find Hard Work in Adjustment

In the higher ranges of public service men appear to comeforward to perform a certain duty. When it is performed their work is done. They usually find it impossible to readjust themselves in the thought of the people so as to pass on successfully to the solution of new public problems.

An examination of the records of those Presidents who have served eight years will disclose that in almost every instance the latter part of their term has shown very little in the way of constructive accomplishment. They have often been clouded with grave disappointments.

While I had a desire to be relieved of the pretensions and delusions of public life, it was not because of any attraction of pleasure or idleness.

We draw our Presidents from the people. It is a wholesome thing for them to return to the people. I came from them. I wish to be one of them.

Although all our Presidents have had back of them a good heritage of blood, very few have been born to the purple. Fortunately, they are not supported at public expense after leaving office, so they are not expected to set an example encouraging to a leisure class.

They have only the same title to nobility that belongs to all our citizens, which is the one based on achievement and character, so they need not assume superiority. It is becoming for them to engage in some dignified employment where they can be of service as others are.

Our country does not believe in idleness. It honors hard work. I wanted to serve the country again as a private citizen.

In making my public statement I was careful in the use of words. There were some who reported that they were mystified as to my meaning when I said, "I do not choose to run."

Although I did not know it at the time, months later I found that Washington said practically the same thing. Certainly he said no more in his Farewell Address, where he announced that "choice and prudence" invited him to retire.

Asked to Refuse
If Requested to Run Again for Office

There were others who constantly demanded that I should state that if nominated I would refuse to accept. Such a statement would not be in accordance with my conception of the requirements of the Presidential office. I never stated or formulated in my own mind what I should do under such circumstances, but I was determined not to have that contingency arise.

I therefore sent the Secretary to the President, Everett Sanders, a man of great ability and discretion, to Kansas City with instructions to notify several of the leaders of State delegations not to vote for me. Had I not done so, I am told, I should have been nominated.

The report that he had talked with me on the telephone after his arrival, and I had told him I would not accept if nominated, was a pure fabrication. I had no communication with him of any kind after he left Washington and did not give him any such instruction or message at any time.

I thought if I could prevent being nominated, which I was able to do, it would never be necessary for me to decide the other question. But in order to be perfectly free, I sent this notice, so that if I declined no one could say I had misled him into supposing that I was willing to receive his vote.

I felt sure that the party and the country were in so strong a position that they could easily nominate and elect some other candidate. The events have confirmed my judgment.

In the primary campaign I was careful to make it known that I was not presenting any candidate. The friends of several of them no doubt represented that their candidate was satisfactory to me, which was true as far as it went.

I can conceive a situation in which a President might be warranted in exercising the influence of his office in selecting his successor. That condition did not exist in the last primary. The party had plenty of material, which was available, and the candidate really should be the choice of the people themselves. This is especially so now that so many of the states have laws for the direct expression of the choice of the voters.

A President in office can do very much about the nomination of his successor, because of his influence with the convention, but the feeling that he had forced a choice would place the nominee under a heavy handicap.

Cannot Describe
How the President's Office Differs

When the convention assembles it is almost certain that it will look about to see what candidate has made the largest popular showing, and unless some peculiar disqualification develops it will nominate him. That was what happened in the last convention, although no one had a majority when the convention assembled.

A strong group of the party in and outside of the Senate made the mistake of undertaking to oppose Mr. Hoover with a large number of local candidates, which finally resulted in their not developing enough strength for any particular candidate to make a showing sufficient to impress the convention.

Although I did not intimate in any way that I would not accept the nomination, when I sent word to the heads of certain unpledged delegations not to vote for me, they naturally turned to Mr. Hoover, which brought about his nomination on the first ballot.

The Presidential office differs from everything else. Much of it cannot be described, it can only be felt. After I had considered the reasons for my being a candidate on the one side and on the other, I could not say that any of them moved me with compelling force.

My election seemed assured. Nevertheless, I felt it was not best for the country that I should succeed myself. A new impulse is more likely to be beneficial.

It is therefore my privilege, after seeing my administration so strongly indorsed by the country, to retire voluntarily from the greatest experience that can come to mortal man. In that way I believe I can best serve the people who have honored me and the country which I love.

THE END.

A HOME PAPER FOR PEOPLE WHO THINK
BOSTON, MONDAY, MAY 6, 1929
SECOND SECTION

KNIGHT of the AIR by WINIFRED VAN DUZER

Thrilling 6-Day Novel by Noted Author

CHAPTER 1

CHATTA MASON, oval of face, dark and bewitching, had filched an afternoon off with Jane Seymour, known as Ginger on Broadway, and Virginia Lietersen, the Dresden shepherdess blonde. They were at the race track.

Chatta, daughter of Jock Mason, old-time jockey, had always shunned the track.

"I'm betting on Persiflage," said Vee. "She's sure to win. Alban's been holding her back."

So Chatta and the three collected small winnings.

While they stood in the colorful throng Chatta was conscious of a man smiling at her.

She saw that in spite of his young middle-age he had the straight, athletic figure of a boy.

And then Ginger's cool voice murmured, "Hello, Carl Alban!"

Alban laughed down at the three girls.

"Aren't you proud of Persiflage?" asked Chatta.

"As a matter of fact, I didn't see the race. I was watching you!"

Ginger looked up sharply and Vee giggled.

Thrilled to her fingertips Chatta stammered, "I didn't suppose there could be anything so thrilling unless it's that crazy aviator up there."

Now the plane dived downward.

Vee screamed and Chatta felt a sick giddiness as a strong arm moved behind her shoulders and Alban's merry voice cried, "This is good; I've seen him do it before. Watch, now!"

"He's one of those idealists," Alban told them. "Got a lot of notions about promoting aviation. He and his pal—that's Ace Streator, by the way, the fellow who gave the German planes so much to worry about—have a headquarters down in Jersey near Neptune Point. They're teaching high flying and taking folks sky-taxi-riding . . . You girls going back to town? Plenty of room in my wagon."

Chatta found herself next to Alban, who kept looking at her with his delighted smile and drawing her out about the race his colt had won that afternoon.

Chatta stole uneasy glances at Ginger remembering how she had looked out for her three years before when she had come, a green, scared kid, into the chorus. Ginger was two years older than herself and Vee, who had started in with Chatta, and she had taught them both the things they needed to know and befriended them with a sort of hard-boiled, kindly watchfulness.

It had been a staunch, three-cornered friendship, with Ginger's mentality balancing Vee's scatterbrained emotions and helping to crystalize Chatta's own definite ambitions.

Alban promised to take them to dinner after the show, and left them at the theater.

They were in the gayest and gaudiest and most outrageously glittering of all the Broadway night clubs.

Chatta barely had touched her champagne, but that one taste, struck recklessly through her.

"Pooh!" she cried, gaily, think of it. Good old Jock!" "no fun blooming under glass. This lily would rather toil like the dickens and blossom in green and yellow light bulbs, with all Broadway looking on. You think that a quaint notion, Mr. Man!"

Alban leaned toward her and spoke in a low, oddly vibrant voice, "You wish to be a star, Chatta? I would like that for you, I would like to see that you have what you want.

"I prefer to come into the stretch under my own colors.

"You've picked up some of the track lingo, haven't you!"

"Can you imagine any one near Jock Mason not knowing it? I ask you!"

"What!" Alban asked sharply. "Jock Mason? You knew Jock? But he's been out ten years—spilled on a slippery track. There was a horseman! You say you knew him! Chatta?"

"Didn't you get my name? He was my father."

Now Alban's poise was shaken. He finally got out, "I'd no idea. A great horseman and the squarest jockey in the world. He never told you what he did for me. Jock Mason was as much a part of my boyhood as my own father!"

"Lord, Chatta, if I'd known! Searched high and low for his widow—I didn't know about you—but she's disappeared Little Catherine Evarard she was; I used to hear my father speak of her. You're some like her, but more like your dad, now I think of it. Good old Jock!"

"Tired!" Alban asked with a new gentleness. "Do you want to go home?"

She admitted in an embarrassed way that she would. "I expect you'll laugh and say it can't be so," she confessed "But it's the honest fact that this is the second party I've been to all year. Nobody believes that," she went on, rather shyly. "They think because you're in the chorus you

PUSH FIGHT ON OIL PLANT

Mayor Casassa and members of the Revere city council are to meet tonight and make further plans in the effort to prevent the erection of a plant to store 2,000,000 gallons of gasoline on the Saugus bank of the Pines river, a stream separating Saugus and Revere.

Saugus selectmen have already voted their permission for the project despite the strong objections made by Revere officials and property owners, who fear that the river and the beach may be polluted by oil and that the plant may constitute a fire hazard. The Revere opponents plan to take their protests to State Fire Marshal Neal and the courts, if necessary.

HEARING IN ROW OVER PRIMARY

The use of the word "renomination" on the papers of former Representative Harold M. Bradbury of Cambridge in connection with the special primary and election on May 14 and May 28, to fill the vacancy in the Second Middlesex House District, was protested today at a hearing before the State ballot law commission by Edwin A. Cutting of that city. Both are Republicans.

Cutting declared that Bradbury was defeated in the regular election last November, that that defeat several his connection with the Legislature, and took away the right to use the contested resignation.

"There is no present incumbent for the office and, therefore, under the law, Mr. Bradbury cannot seek renomination," he argued.

In his defense Bradbury claimed he wished to make his protest against the seating of Representative Timothy D. Sullivan, who resigned before the Legislature came in, but was prevented from doing this until after Sullivan had taken the oath.

The Curious Quizzer

Arlington Folk Answer His Daily Question and Pose for Picture

THE QUESTION

Do you believe that freedom of port, recently criticized by a New York jury as a result of liquor scandals, should still be accorded government officials?

VERA MARSHALL, 192 Rawson rd. I do not think the freedom of port should be accorded government officials. The men who we choose to represent us as government officials should be the first to abide by the rules and regulations of this government. Their conduct should be an example, and they should accept no privileges which are not accorded the general public.

BEATRICE MARSHALL, 182 Rawson rd.—I feel just the opposite way about it from my sister. If we choose certain men to represent us as government officials, we should consider them absolutely trustworthy, and grant them privileges which are not allowed the public. The very fact that they are officials of our government should imply absolute trustworthiness on their part.

NORMAN SMITH, 216 Massachusetts ave.—Of course freedom of port should be allowed to government officials, or at least to some of them. I believe that certain privileges should be accorded to certain officials, that the higher up they are the more privileges they should have. After all a man's fitness for public office should depend upon his integrity, and such a man should be expected not to abuse the special privileges accorded him.

A. MERCADANTE, Lowell st.—Why should a government official receive privileges which all the citizens do not enjoy? The government of this nation is based on the theory of equality among all men, and all men should be treated equally. Granting special privileges to government officials only tends to produce ill feeling between the official and the private citizen. Both should receive the same treatment from the government.

RESCUES WOMAN AFIRE

Mrs. Adele Wegler, 38, of 216 Highland st., Roxbury, and Patrolman James Reddington of Station 10, were burned about the hands and face today while extinguishing flames in the woman's clothing.

Mrs. Wegler was taken to City hospital for treatment, while Reddington was given first aid by firemen and went home.

The policeman was passing the house at 216 Highland st. when he heard cries from the Wegler apartment on the second floor and saw smoke. He gave the alarm, ran upstairs and found Mrs. Wegler's clothing in flames. He helped her extinguish them, and firemen put out the blaze in the apartment, said to have been started by children playing with matches. The loss was slight.

The domestic help problem is solved by taking a kitchenette apartment and the best are advertised daily in the For Rent columns.

LAST SEEN ON ROAD TO BOSTON

Providence, May 6—Somewhere on the open road on a motorcycle Anthony Rakowski, 28, former Connecticut State trooper, and Evelyn Breedon, 16, of Warwick, R. I., were hunted today as prospective elopers.

According to Warwick police, the couple have been missing since Friday, when the girl packed some clothing and departed with Rakowski on a Connecticut-registered motorcycle.

State police and police of cities and towns throughout New England have been asked to be on the lookout for the girl and her companion. They are believed to have headed north into Maine or Canada.

Braves Seek Series Edge By Win Over Pirates Here

ED BRANDT TO PITCH TODAY

Braves Out to Start Another Winning Streak; Team Holds Confidence

By NICK FLATLEY

Our Braves set out to start a new winning streak today.

The Pirates stopped the hustling Fuchs athletes, after they had rolled up five consecutives triumphs, but that was to be expected. No team can win 'em all, and little spurts like four or five straight are welcomed much more by managers than longer strings, which get the athletes nervous.

It was a shame, of course, that the biggest crowd that has seen a game here since the far back world series days, had to be around for the explosion of the big parade, but things happen that way.

Nick Flatley

The boys and the girls saw a fighting Braves team go down kicking, and had enough brilliant baseball tossed in to make it a very happy day. Even in defeat there were the earmarks of future greatness. A triple play on a blow that with luck might have been a hit, showed better than anything that the luck wasn't with the Tribe.

Nobody is kicking nor discouraged, though. Players expect beatings once in a while, after they've happened, and look on them philosophically.

"Getting licked doesn't mean so much," stated Judge Fuchs this a. m., "it's the way you get licked. When a team doesn't fold up in the face of handicaps, there's always hope. The Braves kept slugging, and had the gang with them. They tell me that most of that great crowd stuck around until the last out.

"The fans, I guess, could see that the Braves were trying. They're smart enough to know that a ball game is never over till it's over, what I mean. We didn't have the luck, but we've had our share up to now, so we have no kick coming. Today is another day."

BRANDT TO TOSS

The Judge will send a southpaw after this final pastime with the Pirates, whose great pitching strength is left handed. Big Ed Brandt, who has won a couple of games, was flat on the list. Ed expects to be a great pitcher this year, and has started well. If he has his stuff, he will worry the Bucco. In case Edward isn't fit, Percy Lee Jones will do the honors. Percy has unfurled three very fine games to date.

Little Rabbit Maranville is the talk of the village just now. The boys had been reading of his stunts on the road, and looked for a lot of flossy stuff. So the midget gave them a little more than they hoped for.

He is covering short as no shortstop has since he was here before, and it would take a wizard to point out where he has slipped in the slightest from the days of his sparkling brilliance. He takes balls on either side, with his old snap and grace, and he can still zip that baseball across to first from any old position.

RABBIT GREAT

Some of the speed may be gone from that remarkable chunk of his, but he always beats the runner, which is all that counts. And, it might be mentioned, he hasn't edged in closer toward the diamond, as ageing vets do when the wings soften up. The Rabbit, in his present form, is once again the greatest shortstop in baseball and as far as anyone can observe, is improving steadily.

He should be quite a ball player in a month or so. Thus far Maranville has played through 11 ball games without any sign of an error. And he has made more than his share of sparkling plays. Two of his Sunday stunts will give the gang something to talk of for weeks hence.

The little marvel has accepted 48 chances flawlessly, 29 putouts and 39 assists. And that's short stopping in any kind of company. He's the spark plug of the outfit, and is getting more hits than ever he did before in the spring. He's one of the Braves' best hitters thus far, and undoubtedly the smartest base runner on the club.

He teams up wonderfully with Freddy Maguire, and this sure fisted pair will give the Ford-Critz combination of Cincinnati a real battle for the double play honors, unless one or the other gets hurt. And they're not fragile athletes.

Lance Richbourg will begin to work out this week, and the dope expect to have his finger rebuilt so that he can get in the game by the end of the week.

Okmulgee, Okla., May 6 (AP)—With 1612 miles of the 3400 miles trek from New York to the Pacific Coast covered, the 24 remaining bunioneers in C. C. Pyle's transcontinental derby today plodded along on a 70-mile lap to Holdenville.

Anthony Winninger, Williamsport, Mass., and Herman Kester, Sawtelle, Cal., dropped out on the 44-mile tramp from Muskogee to Okmulgee.

Gluste Umek, Trieste, Italy, scored his third consecutive victory by finishing in first place. He sliced an hour from the margin of Johnny Salo, Passaic, N. J., second in elapsed time, but still is 12 hours behind the policeman. Salo

N. E. TRACKMEN IN TITLE MEET THIS MONTH

By winning their seventh consecutive dual meet victory at Springfield College Saturday, 76 to 58, and smashing three college records, Northeastern's track and field performers are favored to go into the New England Intercollegiates this month with an unblemished indoor and outdoor record.

The coming Saturday the Huskies have an engagement with Colby College, at Waterville, and on the Saturday after that they defend their Eastern Intercollegiate title at Worcester.

MADE RECORDS

Records established by the Back Bay team at Springfield were: Capt. Almon Morang, high jump, 6 feet, 1¾ inches; George Martin, pole vault, 12 feet; John Ingraham, hammer throw, 127 feet, 1 inch.

Morang turned in the best high jumping in the East the past weekend. The Waltham junior was ably seconded at Springfield by his teammate Jack Morley, the Hyde Park youth, who came back after a spine injury three years ago.

Martin also had assistance from a teammate, Matti Lundell, sophomore from South Paris, Me., who cleared 11 feet to tie for second although he was in the hospital a week before as the result of spiking himself at the handicap meet.

Charles Cheney, the Huskies' other pole vaulter who does close to 12 feet, did not compete at Springfield, but he is practicing regularly and may yet see action this season.

MORANG BROAD JUMPS

Morang incidentally was third in the broad jump, the event he recently took up. His distance was 20 feet, 11 inches, the best he has ever done, and this performance augurs well for the future.

Lundell was a surprise winner in the javelin, heaving the wooden wand 163 feet, 6 inches.

His teammate, Aigot Forsberg, who placed in the javelin in the New England last season, had a lame arm, and had to be content with third. He also took third in the discus.

The half-mile was won by Charles Thompson, brilliant Medford runner, who also won the quarter. In the quarter both Thompson and Francis Shea defeated the Springfield captain, Mosher.

MR. BOSTON

by JACK CONWAY

MR. BOSTON slipped into the seat next to where Al Mello was sitting as the Merchants Limited rumbled on its way to Boston from New York.

"How are you feeling, Al?" inquired the veteran.

"All right today," replied the New England welterweight champion who had only recently been defeated by Gorilla Jones at the New York Garden. "I don't carry any marks from the fight and didn't take much body punishment. What hard smashes I took were around the head."

"What was the matter with you?" pressed Mr. Boston. "You didn't look like yourself except in the first and ninth rounds."

"My bad break occurred late in the second round," chirped Mello. "I ducked to get out of the way of a right hand punch to the chin and the blow hit me behind my left ear. It dazed me and it was the ninth round before my head cleared.

"I understand I was knocked down twice, once in the second round and again in the seventh frame, but I only remember going to the canvas once. I have a faint recollection of hearing somebody say 'five' and then pulling myself to my feet.

"Between the latter part of the second round when I was hit that blow back of the ear and the ninth session I fought as if in a dream. At times I thought I was reading a book on the train going from Boston to New York. On other occasions I believed I was in the gym training.

"I FINALLY looked up and noticed that it was the ninth round. My head remained clear for the entire round. I thought it had been a quick fight. I opened up and gave everything I had in a desperate effort to win by a knockout.

"I continued my spurt for the first part of the 10th round, then I went into a fog again. I wasn't myself until a couple of hours after the bout."

"What kind of a fighter is Jones?" asked Mr. Boston.

"He's a first class man," replied Al. "He boxes well and has a good sock in his right. But I'll lick him when we meet again. I don't look for him to get a break with one of his right hand belts."

ATTY. JOHN P. FEENEY, famous trial lawyer, was on the train. He was impressed by Mello's quiet, unassuming manner. Atty. Feeney has recovered from his recent attack of gripps and proved he still has his old fire by winning an important legal battle in the New York courts.

"How do you keep in condition for your work?" asked Mr. Boston.

"By playing golf" was the quick reply. "When the weather is good, I try to get in as much golf as possible. It furnishes a safety valve for me."

"Do you think you'll be able to beat Babe Ruth this year?" said Mr. Boston laughingly.

"I've even offered to bet $100 that I can lick Jack Kearns who is supposed to be one of the best golfers in sport," shot back Feeney.

VON ELM LEADS U.S. PLAYERS

Farrell and Dudley Turn In Poor Cards of 82 and 85, Respectively

Horton Smith finished and Walter Hagen and Wild Bill Mehlhorn started. There was one advantage in the afternoon, however.

The last players out made preparations to withstand the storm, piling on all the waterproof clothing they could carry and still play their shots.

Even the enthusiastic Scotch galleries which braved the bursts of rain in the morning were driven from the Fairways and the world's great golfing figures played dismal, uncomfortable rounds before small groups.

The best score of the early finishers over the Muirfield course was a 75, scored by Archie Compston.

George Von Elm and Bobby Cruickshank, with 75's at Cullane, had been tied for the early lead.

Two of the American Ryder cup team went over 80 for the first 18 holes, Johnny Farrell, the open champion, taking 82 and Ed Dudley 85. Farrell had a nine on his card and Dudley an eight.

Fred Jewell of Long Ashton scored a 72 at Cullane to slip under the first mark set by the American pro and amateur. The veteran, J. H. Taylor, playing with Jewel, had a creditable 77.

Until Compston chimed in with 75, a count of 77, compiled by Albert Whiting, Royal St. Georges, led the Muirfield field.

As the afternoon starters went to the first tee, rain, which had started in mid-morning, settled down to a steady, soaking downpour.

Farrell took six strokes to reach the seventeenth green and then used three putts before he was finally down.

Dudley's eight at the uphill fifth resulted in part from visits paid to two bunkers on the way.

Although four over fours at the sixteenth, Farrell needed only a five and a four to score 77, which would have been safe enough in all probability. Instead he took a nine and a five.

At the seventeenth he sent a brassie deep in a cross bunker. The ball was so buried that it was unplayable, so the open champion of the United States went back and played another. Losing stroke and distance this shot went into another bunker and he then pitched to the green and took three putts. At the eighteenth he missed a putt of three feet for a par four.

Sid Brews, South Africa, scored 79. The veteran James Braid took 2 and Jack White 4.

Al Watrous played the Muirfield course in 77, coming home at a faster clip than that registered going out.

In one of the worst downpours of the day, Gene Sarazen finished with a score of 81.

Jimmie Thompson, young professional from Knoxville, Tenn., covered the Cullane course in 77.

Leo Diegel went out with a sensational score of 35, but needed 39 to get home for a score of 74.

John Golden scored 79 for his first 18 holes.

Joshua Crane, Boston amateur, found much trouble on the Cullane course and used 7 strokes.

Phil Perkins, British amateur champion, finished his round with a score of 78.

Horton Smith played his first 18 holes of the qualifying tests in 78 strokes, while Al Espinosa, another American professional threat, took just 80.

Tommy Armour, former open champion of the United States, called on his Scotch background to aid him in opposing the weather and turned in a score of 77.

Arnaud Massey, French professional, scored 78.

MacDonald Smith found some trouble in negotiating the Muirfield course, but his first 18 holes of 79 left him in a comfortable position.

Joe Turnesa joined the group of American pros who scored 79 for the first 18 holes.

Ted Ray, veteran British professional, was aroun din 80.

Great Field Enters Preakness Race

Baltimore, May 6 (AP)—Featuring the last week of racing at Pimlico which starts today, is the $50,000-added Preakness stakes, to be run on Friday, with more than a score of three-year-olds slated to face the barrier in that classic of the Maryland racing season.

Of the 22 probable starters for the event, 16 have already made their appearance at Maryland tracks, and seven of these have been returned winners, with Minatour, Charles Gaffagnini's hope, finishing in front three times, once each at Bowie, Havre De Grace and Pimlico. His first at Pimlico paid his backers 51 to 1 last week.

Bethlehem on Top

New York, May 6—Bethlehem regained the leadership of the Eastern Soccer League by defeating Pinkoes, 3-to-0.

Whittals Defeat Woburn Tanners

Whittals of Worcester, leaders in the Massachusetts State Soccer League, got the better brake in a 4-3 victory over Tanners Club at Fleming Field, Woburn.

They were awarded two penalty kicks, both protested by the hometowners, and both were improved upon, McIntyre netting from the 12-yard spot. Toward the end of the game Goaltender Adams of the upstate side was dismissed by striking Referee Peter Garrigan.

Swiftback drove in the first goal after 15 minutes. Then followed a penalty kick three minutes later.

O'Brien of Woburn kicked the ball against his team-mate Horner's hand and McIntyre made no mistake from the setup.

Ex-B. C.-H. C. Men Form Detroit Battery

The Detroit Tigers will draw many Boston College and Holy Cross fans to Fenway Park when they play the Red Sox during the current American League season.

Eddie Phillips, former Boston College catcher, is now receiving the tosses of Ownie Carroll, once of Holy Cross, for the Tigers. And it was only a few years back that these two boys were important figures in the Eagle-Crusader baseball games.

Phillips, the only B. C. man now in the big league and getting along, is catching a great game for Detroit and batting for an average of .370.

George Thorpe Scores Freak Hole in One

George Thorpe, professional at the Homestead Country Club in Danvers, mixed billiards with his golf and produced a freakish holein-one.

At the 193-yard third, he belted a spoon shot in the direction of the green but the wind caught the ball and blew it against a shelter at the fourth tee, some 25 yards away. The ball caromed off the shelter at right angles, jumped to the green and rolled into the cup.

The ball hit the wooden shelter with sufficient force to leave behind an imprint of its mesh marking. George's playmates were Al Johnson, Douglas Calder and Gordon Allen.

B. C. Frosh Nine Plays B. C. High on Saturday

The Boston College freshman baseball team will not get into action until Saturday of this week, when they meet Boston College high at University Heights.

Coach Frank McCrehan's Maroon and Gold outfit has won one and dropped one. B. U. was the victim, while St. Anselm's took the measure of the Heights '32 aggregation.

Ed Mannix, former Brighton high boy, will probably face Bill Boehner of B. C. high.

Randolph Nine Downs Cambridge

Randolph All-Stars shut out the Cambridge A. C., 6 to 0, at the Randolph st. playground.

Joe Monte Choice Over Rawson for Bout at Arena

DIAMOND BATTLES PARKER

Junior Featherweights Expected to Produce Thrills in Semifinal Match

By JACK CONWAY

HOW good a fighter is Big Boy Rawson?

Joe Monte will answer that question when he clashes with Larrupin Larry in a 10-round bout at an Arena. A. C. show at the New Boston Arena tomorrow night.

One week ago Big Boy floped Hambone Kelley over with a couple of punches, but there is very little chance of his repeating tomorrow night.

Monte is the best boxer Rawson has ever been called upon to meet. The Brockton warrior is a seasoned performer and has appeared frequently in feature bouts in the New York Garden and at the Arena.

Jack Conway

James J. Braddock, who knocked out Tuffy Griffiths and Jimmy Slattery, finished second best to Monte. So did Georgie Rowe, while Hambone Kelley was a sort of pushover for the Brockton citizen.

All this has caused Monte to be installed a favorite for the Arena jam.

BIG BOY RAWSON isn't worrying about Monte's reputation. He has sufficient confidence in his own ability to believe he can win by a kayo tomorrow night.

Al Lacey has been training Big Boy, and he says the heavy thumper is in good condition. Lacey prepared Rawson for his recent meeting with Hambone Kelley. That engagement did not go long enough to give one a real line on Rawson. The latter, however, will receive an opportunity to show how much he has improved when he steps to bat with Monte.

The Arena Club has the boxing field to itself this week, and it is expected there will be a large crowd on hand when Rawson and Monte step into action.

IT is seldom that a semifinal bout has attracted as much attention as the eight-round tussle between Hy Diamond of the West End and Charley Parker of the South End. These boys are junior featherweights. Each has a world of class and bright futures. There is sure to be action when they collide. The tussle is a natural.

In the sixes, Joe Cabana of the Cape clashes with Eddie Callahan of Arlington, while Tony Mitchell of Somerville will battle Joe Stockman of Dorchester. They'll also be fours four's.

IF all goes well, Eddie Mack of the Boston Garden will have Max Schmeling battling Con O'Kelley at Braves Field on June 3. The New York and Massachusetts commissions have agreed that the German heavyweight will have to keep his contract with the Boston Garden before he is allowed to engage in any other match.

Mack has turned down all offers asking him to release Schmeling outright or release him until after the Paulino bout in New York on June 27. Eddie has an idea Schmeling and O'Kelley will play to a sell-out at Braves Field.

SCHMELING will arrive in Montreal on Friday. It has been announced that his reason for desiring to go to Montreal is that he may visit relatives there. Max has not any friends, let alone relatives, in Montreal. He has picked the Canadian city as his point of arrival so that he can be made legal proof before he steps foot on American soil.

Some dozen managers and promoters are waiting to serve Schmeling with various kinds of legal documents upon his arrival here. Jack Dempsey must sympathize with the German. The Tiger has had his share of trouble with the law.

Wolfendens Lose to Boston Celtics

A misunderstanding over the kickoff prevented Boston Celtics fielding a full eleven against Wolfenden, champions of Attleboro, but they succeeded in mastering the Jewelers, 3 to 0, in a rough game.

Tuner opened the scoring and Ritchie made it one better 10 minutes after the resumption. Smith kicked Logan, and following the argument Smith rushed at the Celt and a rumpus started. Logan continued to swap punches with the visitor, resulting in both being ordered off the field.

Busy Week Ahead for Schoolboy Teams

By DICK McSWEENEY

A week of scholastic sports competition with many upsets has passed, to be followed by another busy period of activity in all branches of sport.

Baseball is on the schoolboy program today, with two tennis matches also scheduled.

Lynn English will play at Revere and Dean Academy nine will play the Harvard seconds at Cambridge.

The Cambridge Latin net team pays a visit to Newton's court, while Boston English faces the strong Woburn racquet wielders on the latter's playing surface.

There are some fine diamond encounters on tomorrow with Reading journeying to Saugus, Boston English opposing Jamaica Plain, Wellesley at Rivers school, and Wentworth Institute's great outfit tackling Lynn G. E. apprentices.

On Wednesday, Somerville gets an opportunity to continue its victory spurt in a Suburban League conflict at Cambridge Latin. There is likely to be a pitching duel staged by these two clubs, with Hall or Hutchinson hurling for Somerville and McFadden tossing for the Cantabs.

Norwood gets into action on Wednesday, also, playing Attleboro at the latter's diamond. Revere and Peabody arrange a North Shore war at Peabody. Lowell will attempt to emulate Medford's feat in humbling Haverhill; Waltham goes to Belmont, and those two bitter sport rivals, Malden and Everett, clash in the smelting city.

Lawrence academy will test the mettle New Hampshire frosh, while the fine Rindge nine travels to Dean.

Newton, and Medford pays a call at Lynn English.

A pair of horsehide frays on Thursday, B. C. high at Jamaica Plain, and Wentworth Institute at Huntington School, will attract many.

On Saturday, a Suburban league melee which will pack Dilboy Field is on between Newton and Somerville. Another fine pitchers' battle is promised here with the probability of Reilly working on the mound for Newton and Hall doing box duty for the Red and Blue.

Medford found that it had a good pitching prospect in Leavitt, last Saturday, when this youth hurled winning ball against Haverhill. The Blue and White may use him against Cambridge Latin this coming Saturday.

Everett entertains on Saturday with Jamaica Plain as its guest. La Angelo or Ward are expected to check any slugging abilities which the Plainsmen may uncover. Haverhill wants to score a victory over Malden when it faces the Blue and Gold at the Pearl st. stadium. The latter outfit was a bit shaken by the 11-0 shutout experienced at Brockton last Saturday.

Other good games billed for Saturday are: Saugus at Sanborn Seminary, Framingham at Norwood, and Worcester Academy at Dean.

Twixt Tee and Cup

By BILL GRIMES

Will Walter Hagen retain his British open crown? Or will one of the other 21 invaders from the States take over the possession of this great title?

Or will a British golfer regain the title which has been held by Americans since Walter Hagen took it away from Arthur Havers in 1924?

The first qualifying round is played at Muirfield, in Edinburgh, Scotland, and the best that American has to offer in the golfing line competed.

Although the rounds of Walter Hagen and Leo Diegel, who are favored to do the lowest scoring among the American invaders, will be closely watched, so, also, will those of Horton Smith, the 20-year-old Missouri sensation.

Many critics are predicting that due to strange climatic conditions, Horton Smith will not make any better showing than did such great players as Bobby Jones and Walter Hagen on their first attempt at lifting the British open crown.

Horton Smith has not met defeat since he finished 15th in the Belleair open last winter. And since that time he has won four open tournaments during which he was pitted against the cream of the golfing world, and he also won his Ryder Cup match.

Although the bookies are offering 50 to 1 against Horton Smith winning the British open, his record in championship and open tournaments does not call for such odds, in spite of all the obstacles the young Missourian is facing at Muirfield.

During Horton Smith's rise to fame, which was accomplished in the short period of six months, he has played over a great variety of courses, under widely varying conditions, and has traveled by rail and boat more than 21,000 miles.

He won the Oklahoma City open in extremely cold weather; was third in the tropical heat of Hawaii; quickly mastered the rolling courses and the cocoos bent greens on the Pacific coast, the sand greens of Texas and Pinehurst and the Bermuda grass and sandy undersoil of Florida.

In all probability Horton Smith will not win the British open, but a safe prediction is that he will make a far better showing than did either Bobby Jones or Walter Hagen in their first shot at England's greatest golf title.

In fact, it will be surprising if Horton Smith finishes in the money and if he meets with this success he will establish himself in the very front ranks of all time golfers.

Carl Nettelbladt and E. R. Vicery will journey down from Worcester next Sunday to participate in the four cornered playoff for the gross prizes of the Woodland Golf Club four ball tournament.

The Worcester pair will battle Gerald Moore and Bill Donnelly, Woodland's kid team. Eddie Murphy and Frank Rapp of Charles River, and Emery Stratton of Brae Burn and Joe Batchelder of Salem.

In all probability, the Country Club, will be assigned to a district before next season rolls around. It is absurd for the Country Club, lacking as it is in first class talent to attempt to carry on single handed. The Brookline Club not only has not enough golfers for a third team but on two occasions this season has been unable to muster even a complete second team.

SONNENBERG MEETS DE VITO ON HUB MAT

Gus Sonnenberg, heavyweight champion of the world, will return to a Boston ring a week from Thursday night, when he will defend his title against Joe DeVito sensational young Italian wrestler from Providence, R. I.

DeVito has clambered to the top by a series of spectacular victories in recent weeks.

He whipped Stanley Pinto, Bohemian champion; gave Stanislaus Zbyszko, former champion of the world, the worst beating of his career; and only last Thursday night cut down big Stanley Stasiak, giant rough and tumble expert, in one of the best matches seen in Boston in many months.

SONNY GOING WELL

After his victory over Stasiak, Paul Bowser signed him to meet Dynamite Gus, who is shattering record after record on another wild whirl through the Middle West.

The bout will be Sonnenberg's first appearance here in several weeks. In his last two bouts here, one with Lewis and the other with Malcewicz, Sonnenberg broke every record for attendances and receipts in the history of wrestling.

The two shows drew $120,000, an almost unheard of figure for the sport of wrestling, and since DeVito has proved himself a worthy challenger for the title, undoubted by he and Sonnenberg will play to a capacity house at the Arena.

DEVITO WORKS HARD

DeVito will start training in Providence immediately, but is expected to arrive here by Wednesday or Thursday for public training sessions at Toland's gymnasium.

Sonnenberg will be back from his latest triumphal tour on Sunday night, and will probably train at Kelley & Hayes' gymnasium all next week.

Score of 288 Should Win British Open

By JOHNNY FARRELL

American Open Golf Champion

EDINBUEGH, Scotland, May 6—In a land where golf preeminently is THE sport, the coming of the British open championship to Muirfield in this region has the natives shaking hands in their kilts from the sheer excitement of it all!

Its four-day play is scheduled to start today.

It is just seventeen years since Muirfield put on its last open play, when Ted Ray (aided and abetted by an inevitable pipe that is very much a part of his personality) won with 295.

That old championship course left a bad taste in the mouth of every professional, and they left the sandy wastes of Muirfield avowing intentions of never returning.

But the old Muirfield has passed, and in its stead there has risen a greater, broader layout that has the look of being terribly formidable but isn't.

THIS is to be one of the most throbbing sports dramas ever staged on English soil, and to me it seems that the battle will wage even fiercer than any had heretofore expected, because I don't think Muirfield is as tough as its reputation.

Many are saying, Tommy Armour included, that 300 will about win.

I think they grossly exaggerate the ruggedness of this course that lies on the seashore but has the characteristics of an inland layout.

I am not in the habit of forecasting happenings in what is the most uncertain of sports, but I honestly believe that four 72s will come pretty close to being low making a total of 288, or the equivalent of even fours for a victory at Muirfield.

SELDOM does the golf traveler come upon fairways so wide and green, so large and open, as at Muirfield. The course boasts more than 300 bunkers, but you will find most of them fringing the fairways along the way to the green, while around the carpets they are comparatively few.

The greens are so sparsely trapped that they have the appearance of being bigger than they really are.

Those who wander from the straight and narrow will encounter trouble in large doses, but a man must be sadly off his game to get off Muirfield's generous fairways.

WHEN Ray won in 1913 the course measured 4000 yards, while in its present state it stretches to 6700.

These extra 700 yards, divided among the 18 holes, do not seem to have added very much to the strength of the course for the reason that since 1912 the ball has been given more resiliency. Drives today are a good deal longer than they were then.

Our main worry at Muirfield, as I see it, is wind. The holes are arranged in a crazy-quilt fashion, shooting off in all directions.

The wind seems to hit you from a different angle at every hole, which keeps you constantly reckoning each breeze as an asset or a liability.

EVENING New York Stocks AMERICAN New York Curb MARKET

DOUBTS THAT LOAN TOTAL IS TOO HIGH

Financial authorities do not accept without question the statement that too much money is being loaned on the stock market. In its latest report on this situation, The Brookmire Economic Service, Inc., expresses a belief that analysis of loans would reveal that they are not at all out of proportion to the increase in security listings, business requirements for new capital and broader security markets in general.

Yet, the policy of Federal Reserve Board is to discourage the public against further participation in the speculative market and all but a few of the banks are cooperating. This condition in the money market, together with the prospect of noticeable decline in business activity this summer, makes it difficult for the general market to move forward from this level.

Record business volumes in the first quarter of 1929 and the sustaining influence on sales prospects for the following six months or more is also favorable.

The present high level of purchasing power in some sections such as the central western states, eastern manufacturing states and the industrial sections of New England, industrial work and the far west, should be sustained.

Total income for the United States during the next six months is estimated at 39.4 billion dollars, a gain of approximately 6 per cent over the same period of last year.

Interest Machine Simplified Further

A new addingcalculator which greatly facilitates the figuring of interest in banking work is announced. The greater speed and accuracy in the calculation of interest is made possible by a row of keys set on the right hand side of the new machine. The keys are nine in number and each represents a different rate of interest.

Heretofore, in the figuring of interest, it has been necessary to obtain the number of days in the interest rate and put it in the machine by the depression of three or four keys according to the number of decimal places necessary. With the new machine, for instance, the depression of the key in the fifth interest key column, marked four and one-half per cent, will automatically enter the reciprocal of that rate in the machine. Then, by a throw of a lever, the interest is computed without further attention from the operator. The nine keys make it possible to figure interest at nine different rates on one machine.

McCLINTOCK TO DISCUSS ROAD SAFETY

By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor

Dr. Miller McClintock, director of the Albert Russell Erskine Bureau of Street and Highway Research at Harvard, speaks June 1 over the air" on "Making Our Highways Safe." His talk will be one in a series of safety talks over WEAF and the 30-station network of the National Broadcasting Co. Dr. McClintock, who has had much success in traffic regulation in other cities, was chosen by Mayor Malcolm E. Nichols to conduct like work in Boston.

Miller McClintock — Alfred H. Swayne

Industrial leaders feature the series of safety talks. President B. E. Crowley of the New York Central was heard Saturday. Vice-President Alfred H. Swayne of General Motors is to discuss "The Automobile and Safety," June 15. Harry F. Guggenheim will be heard June 22, and Joseph E. Shendy, vice-president of U. S. Lines, will talk June 29.

The smooth flow of traffic, made as rapid as is consistent with a reasonable degree of safety, is essential for the continuance and growth of our prosperity. We have pointed this out before, citing the very natural interest shown by chambers of commerce and other trades bodies throughout the country. It seems strange that we have so few genuine traffic experts, since the problem is so vital.

• • •

There is a popular belief that the fatal accident rate in Boston is high. As a matter of fact, Miller McClintock's really expert study shows, among other things, that such accidents are fewer in Boston than in any of the other American cities of the same general population group, which confirms our idea that Boston traffic, between the drivers, pedestrians and police, is pretty well handled.

• • •

Naturally there is a lot of room for improvement in all around. That is why traffic study is everlastingly going on, and of course new problems are always arising. A few people are inclined to think things are done better elsewhere than at home. You have heard the broadcaster's song about "the grass is always greener, etc." Many people are profoundly ignorant regarding our New England traffic regulations.

• • •

They tell us that a speed of 35 miles an hour is allowed outside thickly settled districts in far away States. New Hampshire has a law allowing that speed. There are plenty of places in Massachusetts where 35-mile-an-hour motorists are never held up. Another section of New England, Connecticut, has successfully abolished all speed limits outside the thickly settled districts. Maine thrives, despite the fact that no tests whatever are necessary for automobile driving licenses.

A national study of causes of accidents revealed the fact that by far the greatest number of crashes was due to violation of the right of way. Never in the history of automobiling has a motorist appeared in court, I am told, charged with the offense reported leading all others in causing accidents.

Charles E. Mitchell, head of the great National City Bank, former Boston banker, has occupied the limelight very much of late. The Magazine of Wall Street says: "With no prospect whatever of converting Congress to its point of view, the financial district has been actively debating the subject of limitation of income taxes on stock market profits. Banker Mitchell, head of the National City Bank, stirred up this discussion with a statement to the newspapers that the tax penalty on stock market profits is largely responsible for the high prices of stocks and the absorption of bank credit to carry these shares. Speaking in the general direction of Washington, he has claimed that the tax on capital gain from stock holdings and the artificial price level with its increase in brokers' loans will automatically correct itself."

"Although there is a good deal of disagreement on this view, bankers, brokers, tax experts and others are unanimous on one point, namely, that a definite 'scarcity of value' for stocks exists at the present time and that the motor plays a prominent part in the support of current quotations. Mr. Mitchell (and others) say that this scarcity value is due to the desire of large and small holders of stocks to incur the heavy tax liability. Others say that the unwillingness to let go of stocks which have realized handsome paper profits is the difficulty of finding something better in which to reinvest.

Many observers lay most stress on the fact that as long as the public is making profits by holding stocks they will not sell them. During the past five years traders have had many heartaches by taking profits and then seeing their former holdings soar 50 per cent or more higher. One of the most familiar expressions in the Street in recent years starts this way—"Why I remember when I held ——— Fill in the name of your favorite stock and the 20 or 50 points down where it was sold for a five-point profit, and you have the stock phrase all complete. No wonder traders are willing to hold large profits on paper in a market that they think capable of moving in only one direction."

That $8,000,000,000 to $10,000,000,000 is chargeable to waste in conduct of American business every year and that this waste about equals in amount the whole of American foreign trade of 1928 was stated by Dr. Julius Klein, assistant secretary of commerce. Waste occurs through excessive expenditures in sales promotion, unwise credit methods, disorderly marketing, extravagant delivery services, ill-judged advertising, etc.

Lawrence P. Fisher, vice-president of General Motors, says: "Savings deposits at the close of 1928, reached the staggering sum of more than $28,000,000,000. Corporate stock listings on the New York Stock Exchange totalled more than $6,000,000,000, a new record. Car loadings are running at the highest levels in history. The government debt has been lowered to $17,000,000,000, a decrease of over $6,000,000,000 in eight years. This furnishes an annual interest saving of more than $250,000,000, from which four income tax reductions have been effected." The automobile, he said, "has had much to do in bringing this condition about, as it is the growth of individual transportation that has broadened our prosperity from the Atlantic to the Pacific."

National merger of Fox and Loew theater interests expected to be consummated in New York today, will have no special effect on Boston's theater situation, according to statements by Fox and Loew interests. William K. Bean, promoter of the new Fox theater project, said plans for building were going ahead, that there were a few little differences to be ironed out, but purchase options had been extended and it was expected the deeds would be passed late in July.

Air Lines, Thompson Products, Inc., Towle Aircraft Co., United Aircraft & Transport Corp., United Aviation Corp., Wright Aeronautical Corp.

An approximate division between various forms of activity in the aviation industry represented by the company's investments show 23.1 per cent. in aircraft manufacturing companies, 29.8 per cent. in airport and transport enterprises, 28.3 per cent in manufacturers of motors and accessories and 18.8 per cent in allied lines.

RAYTHEON PACT WITH CARBON

In connection with a proposed increase in capitalization by the Raytheon Manufacturing Company, it is disclosed that an agreement has been entered into between this concern and National Carbon Co., whereby restriction and merchandising of Raytheon products will be mutually developed.

The arrangement provides for production of Raytheon products, including a sometime line of radio tubes and television tubes, by a new corporation called Raytheon Production Company, which will acquire substantially all assets, including patent rights of Raytheon Manufacturing Company.

The latter's stockholders, at a meeting called for May 20, will be asked to ratify an increase in its capital stock to 200,000 shares from 100,000, of which 5000 shares will be issued immediately at $ per share stock dividend, payable June 15 to stock of record June 2.

National Carbon, which is a subsidiary of Union Carbide & Carbon Corporation, will invest $500,000 in the new company, which will be secured by bonds. The remaining $500,000 bonds together with the entire 100,000 shares of capital stock will be issued to Raytheon Manufacturing Company. The new company will acquire, also, valuable patent rights from National Carbon Company.

MOTO METER'S MERGER PLAN

Net sales for the first three months of 1929 were $1,040,874 as compared with $855,269 in the corresponding period of last year, an increase of slightly more than 21 2-3 per cent.

EVELYN BRENT WILL STAR IN 'HIGH YALLER'

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Copyright, 1929, by Universal Service, Inc.
New York, May 6.

EVELYN BRENT is to be pepped up over the chance to play a "high yaller" in Moran and Mack's all-colored picture, slated as their next, that she is already planning her wardrobe. It's a great part, too, written especially for "Betty" by Charles Mack, who believes that Harlem is one of the most picturesque localities in the world.

We have had Harlem, New York's far-famed black belt, in book form, we have had it on the stage, but this is the first time any one has filmed it. Who better than the Two Black Crows, could volunteer as all-colored picture with such a rich atmosphere and so accessible to New York?

That reminds me that the Moran and Mack special, now at Paramount's Long Island studio, near enough to make exteriors in Harlem practical.

"The Backstage Blues," Moran and Mack's first talkie, will be completed some time next week. This one contains the "Early Bird" act which has been so universally popular on radio, victrola and in vaudeville. Miss Brent is their leading lady and it was her work in this picture that brought about the suggestion that she play the lady of color in their next talkie.

A MATRONLY STAR

Here's some good news for the middle-aged matrons of Hollywood. Edward Laemmle, just back from Germany, has been chosen by his uncle Carl to direct "The Drake Murder Case" for Universal. The leading lady in this melodrama will be cast in the first flush of youth—in fact she is middle-aged, and in this case Universal is going to risk to the story written directly for the screen by Charles Logue. None of their young leading ladies will be permitted to disguise themselves, but a woman really in her forties or fifties will be selected to play the lead.

"The First to Command," a glamorous story of the sea, told as only John Farlow knows how to spin tales of the briny deep, has been purchased by United Artists. John wrote his story first for McClure's Magazine, and it was as a magazine yarn that it appealed to United Artists as an ideal vehicle for Louis Wolheim. Wolheim and William Boyd will be co-starred. Lots o fthings are happening to Johnnie Farrow these days. First he signed a new contract as a scenario writer for Paramount, and then on the strength of the new contracts he bought himself a beach house at Malibu.

YNKEES LIKES IRENE

Irene Rich is finding Yonkers a particularly sympathe tic place in which to try out her new vaudeville act. She has been playing all week on the Orpheum circuit, and her act went over so satisfactorily that she moves on to Newark today. She remains with the Orpheum circuit until a movie call sends her back to Hollywood.

There is much talk that this call will come from the Fox studio, where she is being strongly considered for the leading lady in Will Rogers' first picture.

No one suspected that Ken Maynard was a artist as well as an actor until he sketched a portrait of Dolores Del Rio, his leading lady, on the smarf she wears in his picture. He did it so well that it will be shown on the screen, proving to any doubting Thomas that Mr. Maynard cannot only ride a horse and rope a steer, but handle the brush and pallet as well.

The picture he is making with Nora Lane is not yet titled, although it is patterned after his usual western thrillers.

Pipe Line Company to Pay Dividend

Operations of Missouri-Kansas Pipe Line Co. have progressed to the point where Frank P. Farrah, president, characterizes the outlook for a dividend on the stock in July as "certain." The amount and form of this dividend will be fixed by the directors at their next meeting, by which time an analysis of market holdings and the immediate development program, now being made, should be available.

This information is presented in a telegram received today by P. W. Chapman & Co., Inc., bankers, from Farrah, a director of the firm, who also reports that the company has commenced construction to connect its pipe line with that of Owensborough. The pipe for this line has been ordered from the National Supply Company for shipment at the rate of one mile a day. Missouri-Kansas Pipe Line Company is now operating seven drilling rigs of its own and is contracting for several more.

Big Financiers Do Not Like Money Market Condition

By B. C. FORBES

NEW YORK, May 6—The majority of the wealthiest men in the financial world confess, but not for quotation, that they are not bullish on the stock market. They don't like the condition of the money market. They feel that high money, if continued, will inevitably have a restrictive effect upon enterprise. And they don't see how money can become easy until extensive liquidation develops in Wall Street.

B. C. Forbes

A queer sight was witnessed in New York on May Day. Thousands gathered in Union sq., in front of a radical newspaper building, bedecked in revolutionary red Communistic and anarchistic banners by the score were carried by the paraders. "Down With the Bosses" was among the mildest fad was the prevailing color.

The thought which sprang to my mind as I watched this foreign looking crowd with their un-American banners was, "If they don't like this country, why don't they get out of it; why don't they migrate to that paradise of the Communists, Russia?"

How many of our imported Communists and anarchists and other revolutionaries would elect to return to their native countries if given the opportunity? They know where they are well off. But they don't manifest the appreciation which it is hard to believe they do not feel.

Aren't you terribly tired of professional organizers of new clubs, associations, societies and what not? Scratch beneath the surface and you usually find a fat rake-off is taken in by these money-raisers. Why do prominent business men and others allow themselves to be talked into lending their names to schemes without first thoroughly investigating?

There was much rejoicing in Brooklyn over the opening of the Brooklyn parking terminal, a ramp garage, in the very heart of the city, capable of accommodating almost 700 cars. The company considering it plans to erect similar structures at strategic points in New York and other large municipalities. Police Commissioner Whalen would like to see many such refuges for automobiles, because they would greatly simplify what has become one of New York's—and most other cities'—major problems, street parking.

Is garage-building in congested city districts to become a profitable pioneer industry?

Scots are credited with claiming everything they can lay their hands on. The historian (William A. Taylor) of the St. Andrews Society of New York protests! Indignantly arraigns! what was printed in this column about the Lins connections of the Secretary of Mellon and Alexander Hamilton families. Among the mildest things he writes is: "Hamilton was a Scot and Mellon probably is just as Scotch. To talk of North of Ireland people as 'Irish' is misleading—some of them were English and most of them Scottish, and the latter have always resented being called Irish."

The typical Scot may resent what we said, but Secretary Mellon himself hadn't the slightest objection—I asked him in advance—to publishing the fact that his parents and grandparents migrated to the United States from County Tyrone.

The reader whose offending communication was quoted, writes: "There is some dispute about Alexander Hamilton largely because the Hamilton family had estates both in Scotland and Ireland. Their Irish estates were obtained in 1533, and since the adjustment of their affairs with the Crown in 1701, accepted an Irish peerage and again a British peerage, and have had their country seat at Baronscourt in the County of Londonderry in the North of Ireland. The present head of the house, the Duke of Abercorn, is the lieutenant-general of Northern Ireland. I am sure it would interest the Duke to learn, from Mr. Taylor that he is not an Irishman."

It isn't necessary to put all your money into stocks in one day. The market will continue in business the rest of the year.

Welsh Tin Plate Industry Revives

Signs of a revival in the Welsh tin plate industry, which has been in a state of acute depression, are already being manifested as a result of an export agreement recently entered into between British and American tin plate producers, according to the monthly review of the Anglo-Oriental Mining Corporation, one of the largest tin producers in the world.

HARVARD VIEW PICTURES FUND TENSION

Harvard Economic Society comments on the money outlook as follows: "Normally money tends to be seasonally easy from April to July, but present conditions in security markets are such that the seasonal influence may well be offset by speculative demands for credit. Already there has been a renewed expansion of brokers' loans.

"Unless speculative sentiment changes, therefore—possibly as the result of a recession in business—and a reduction occurs in collateral loans, there is little or no prospect that money tension will be appreciably relieved between now and the middle of July.

"There are various indications which suggest that a business recession is impending, but no pronounced change in general activity has so far appeared. Until the situation becomes clearer, therefore, it is necessary to recognize that the money market tension may well persist. In July, indeed, with seasonal demands for the autumn trade developing, we may see a money outlook even more unfavorable than that faced in July, 1928."

Canned Milk in Candies

THIS next rainy Sunday when if you want to be especially sweet to your family, do try this never-fail fudge.

Fudge can be most delicious candy; creamy and delicious or it can be a grainy atrocity that grates pitifully on one's teeth. Chief of the fudge secrets is to let the candy cool without stirring, after it has reached the soft-ball stage. If it is stirred while still hot it is bound to be coarse and granular. Let the syrup cool in the saucepan in which it is cooked or pour it out on a marble slab, platter or agate tray slightly moistened with a piece of wet cheese cloth. Do not disturb it until cool.

Then work it with a wooden spoon or spatula pushing it backwards and forward in a mass until the whole begins to get stiff. Then turn it into a pan or leave it between bars on the table. If the fudge is worked too long to go smoothly into the pan, put it back in the saucepan and warm it slightly over hot water, stirring constantly until it can be readily poured out.

The ideal thickness of fudge is ¾ of an inch, and the pieces should be cut in inch squares. Fudge may be made with brown sugar (penuche) and with maple syrup or sugar. Divinity fudge is the regular fudge syrup boiled to 234 F., and poured upon stiffly beaten egg whites.

Evaporated milk is ideal for making rich fudge, and corn syrup increases the smoothness of the candy.

For this Cocoa Fudge, put 2 tbsps. of butter, 2 cups of sugar, 1 tbsp. of corn syrup, 1-3 cup of cocoa, ¾ cup of evaporated milk and ¾ cup of water all together in a saucepan. Bring to a boil and boil without stirring to 240 F. or the soft-ball stage. Remove from the fire. Beat and stir until it begins to get sugary. Add 1 tsp. vanilla, spread in a shallow buttered pan and mark in squares.

Two May Eat From One Can

A can of food big enough to serve two and costing but ten cents has recently been put on the market. This can, which is known as the eight-ounce can, holds just a cup of food. Practically all the standard fruits and vegetables are put up in it, much to the delight of the apartment housekeeper or the woman with such a small family that she constantly faces the problem of left-overs.

Some of the foods which come in this size are stringless beans, canned prunes, loganberries, raspberries, seedless grapes, Golden Bantam corn, diced carrots, spinach, diced beets, figs, Royal Ann cherries, pears, apricots, pineapple tidbits, fruits for salad, Del Maiz corn and mushrooms.

Chef From Kenmore

CHEF'S day in the Martha Lee Kitchen next Wednesday will be in charge of Mr. Harry Dellamano, chef of the Kenmore Hotel. Mr. Dellamano is a native of Italy, and for several years was connected with the old Georgian at Park sq.

At its closing Mr. W. E. Smith, head of the Georgian cafeteria chain, sent him to Europe to study the finer things of the kitchen, and now that his studies are completed, he is back at the Kenmore under Mr. Smith's personal supervision.

WITH TOURAINE

Mr. Dellamano has been connected with the Hotel Touraine in Boston, the Biltmore in New York, the Palais Royale in Paris, the Lucerne in Milan, the Bellevue at Lake Como, Italy, and the Grand Hotel in Somorie, Switzerland.

The management of the Kenmore feel that they are very fortunate in having a chef of Mr. Dellamano's standing in charge of their culinary department. The Kenmore is justly famous for its excellent dining and coffee room service at reasonable prices, and the hotel is popular both with tourists and regular patronage.

NEW IDEA

Mr. Dellamano will show during his demonstration how to utilize the much-neglected remnants of lamb in such dishes as breaded lamb slices, stuffed lamb, etc. He will also prepare spaghetti a la bolognaise, with a special sauce.

In fact, sauces will be the topic of one part of his lecture, stressing particularly the foundation sauces.

There will also be the preparation of a special salad a la Kenmore.

This is your invitation to join us for this interesting lesson next Wednesday at 2 p. m. in the Marthatha Lee Kitchen at 6 Winthrop sq.

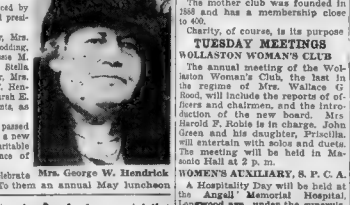
AUCTION BRIDGE by WILBUR C. WHITEHEAD

INFORMATIVE SECOND HAND BID



Auction Bidding—South bids one Heart. West does not hold a sound negative double because of his weakness in Hearts and shortness in Clubs. Therefore he shows his partner bidding values by bidding two Diamonds, thus putting his partner in position to make a free bid of either Spades or Clubs, which West could assist. The soundness of the principle involved is well illustrated by the successful outcome of the bidding

North passing, East takes out his partner's Diamond bid by a bid of three Clubs. South cannot bid three Hearts with a silent partner, so East secures the contract at three Clubs.

Contract Bidding—The bidding at Contract would be the same as at Auction up to East's bid of three Clubs. Following that bid West should bid four Clubs, holding seven probable tricks in his hand in support of the suit, and East should bid five Clubs for game.

The Play—East, the Declarer trumps the third round of Hearts with the Club 2 and notes that in addition to the two Heart tricks, he must lose a Spade trick and the contract, unless he can establish a long Diamond in Dummy upon which to discard a losing Spade. If this fails he still has a remote chance of dropping the Spade Q in two rounds, thus establishing his Jack.

Since the establishment of a long Diamond involves the use of every entry that Dummy possesses, Declarer starts the Diamonds at once instead of leading trumps. By the successful use of all of Dummy's entries a Diamond trick is finally established and brought in and game is made on the hand.

Tomorrow's article will show the bidding and play of another hand

Electricity in China

KIPLING sang a generation ago that "East is East and West is West, and never the twain shall meet." But the world has changed in 25 years, and in the use of modern methods sometimes the East is West.

A wealthy Chinese merchant of Hongkong, China, has recently had electric refrigeration equipment from America installed in his residence to cool his living room.

This information has just been received by Mr. H. Trootwine of the Boston Kelvinator Company, local distributor of Kelvinator equipment, in a copy of a letter sent to the Kelvinator Corporation by its Hongkong distributor.

"To the best of our knowledge," the letter states, "this is the first installation of the kind that has ever been used."

"We are approached by Mr. Fung Fook Tien to know if it were possible to cool one of the rooms of his Repulse Bay residence by means of a Kelvinator. He already had two other Kelvinators and both were giving satisfaction.

"The average summer temperature here is about 90 degrees Fahrenheit, and Mr. Tien wished to have the temperature lowered about 10 degrees."

Tests prove the installation to be working perfectly and the equipment has in no way detracted from the peculiar charm and richness of appearance typical of the houses of wealthy Chinese.

This Oriental innovation will undoubtedly be the forerunner of many other installations in private homes of those compelled to spend the summer months where the climate is excessively warm.

eat nothing but lobster and drown yourself in champagne every night, though how they expect you to get by with it I'm sure I don't know."

"I meant what I said about being a star one day, and I'm trying to save what looks I've got till then by getting some sleep night."

Alban insisted upon their leaving, though the others protested.

Alban stood before Chatta's own door then, holding both her hands. "I'm coming to-morrow, Chatta. There are things to talk over—Lord, what a vowed your dad! Jock Mason's kid! Can't get used to the idea. . . . Goodnight. . . ."

Chatta was up long before her usual hour.

"Mr. Alban called you little Catherine Evarard,'" said the girl. "I'll bet you were a heart-breaker a while back M'ma."

William Carl Alban awakened close to noon in his rooms above Madison ave.

His mind conjured the vision of dark eyes, long lashed, enormous in a young, clear oval of face and a flashing smile. . . . Jock Mason's kid!

Alban was born to wealth and place and power.

After he had tired of Europe he returned to America and, caught suddenly by the lure of the track, left New York for Lexington to look over what was left of his father's stable, once the envy of horsemen.

That was the beginning of Alban, turfman. When he was hardly more than a kid his colors were winners. He recalled the one occasion upon which he forsook his own and took a flier in Wall Street—and the disaster which followed.

But he got a stake together, raising it where he could, borrowing of his friends, and put it on a colt his stable had been holding back. The silent, slightly wizened jockey, Mason, was up that day.

"Lord!" he muttered, "if he hadn't been square! Good old Jock! And she's his kid!

M'ma flushed like a girl when he took her hand.

"To think of seeing you again!" M'ma was murmuring. "And I remember you as a slip of a lad in your teens. Though I must say," she added hastily, "no more handsome!"

They talked about Chatta's future almost gaily. For her father's sake he offered to help her on the basis of an investment. At his urging they accepted help as a loan.

"I could give you a note for it, and pay back as soon as I can," said Chatta. "Though I guess you have to have security or something for a note, don't you?"

He laughed a great deal, and said a note wasn't necessary; that a verbal agreement would do and M'ma could be witness.

Chatta told the girls the news that night.

"Alban's going to loan me the price of a start, dears. Declares he owed father, but that wouldn't make any difference if I didn't know I could pay it back before the interest gets bigger than the capital." Exultance went lilting through her voice. "Watch Chatta and see what happens!"

If you looked more like a crow and less like a bird of paradise Mr. William Carl Alban wouldn't be so particular about his duty—not that I blame him," Ginger said. "And I don't doubt his motives. But other people will. Have you figured on that, Chat?"

"I'm not going to pay any attention to other people. What I do is none of their business."

"Right-o, but they'll make it their business, ol' dearie. Best way is be high hat; public opinion can't bully you if you stare it out of countenance."

Ginger named two famous actresses and an opera singer all noted for the indifferent frankness of their love affairs. "Nobody thinks of being shocked by their turpitude," she went on. "They go out in society, play with the Fifth ave. boys and gals, too, and everybody knows that, as good as their stuff is, they'd never had a chance to show it but for the big boy behind them.

"It looks sometimes as if the wages of sin isn't death at all, but high success. That is, if you keep your mind on where you're going."

"I don't want that kind of high success, and you know it," Chatta said in a cold, strained voice.

"'Course I do, dear Chatta, but other folks don't. And the point I'm trying to make is they never will, because they won't want to. Don't you see? There's a weird streak in collective human nature that makes it want to believe what's worst. . . . I'm telling you, to you'll know what to look for and start growing a thick hide.

Chatta knew suddenly that it was true.

Jay Ross was a puzzle to Broadway, but a success in the producing field.

He strolled up to Chatta as she stood in the wings.

"You're some goil, Chatta. You got that bold runnin' in coicles."

She gave him her full attention now. "What are you talking about, Jay?"

"I was talkin' about this here Alban feller?" He gave her a sharp glance. "Am I right?"

"You are not!" she snapped, and struck him in the face.

His stood, eyes bulging after her, "Hey! You're fired!"

She told Alban this after the show.

"Ross fired me, though that doesn't matter. He fires everyone now and then—sacked the whole chorus at once a while back—but nobody pays any attention. . . ."

Alban gazed at her. At last he said, "Why not let me help you. Now I've got a place on the sea front—near Neptune Point—it'd be great for your mother—you'd better take it, Chatta."

"Oh, Carl—" but she was won over, and she was happy, too.

Now it was Monday and Chatta and M'ma were packing, preparing to leave the rickety flat where they had lived almost the entire ten years since Jock Mason died.

Very little they wished to save. They felt, some way, a fresh beginning.

A clear, high whistle came up the airshaft on which the window opened. That would be Andy Madden, Chatta reflected; he would be working by that back window on his "inventing," a piece of mechanism to revolutionize radio and consequently bring him money enough to buy a lovely home for Vee.

"And Vee all set to give him the gate, poor fellow! Wonder who's right?" she mused. "Supposing Vee has her career, is it going to make her happy? She isn't an independent girl like Ginger and a woman out for success has to fight alone mostly.

"And supposing she lets Andy go and then gets part way up and hasn't the courage or whatever it is to go on. Might not get through so well; Vee's sweet, but there's something she hasn't—strength, I guess. She's meant to be somebody's wife and mother to a lot of youngsters, that's what. But—"

She went down to say goodby to Andy. She found him in the back of the shop, a pleasant-faced boy.

He was polite but distant; he had heard she was leaving and wished her luck. It was clear he thought she would not have it.

"What did Vee tell you, Andy," she demanded. "Don't get this wrong." She explained about Alban, her father's old friend, and the circumstances of her accepting his aid.

"It's all right, Chat. Say, don't bother about me. Just wish me a break on this invention, will you?"

"Of course I do, Andy dear, all there is. Goodby."

It was late afternoon when the nickel-hooded limousine crossed the ferry and rolled down the Jersey Coast. Neptune Point is between New York and Atlantic City. And as they glided into the main street of the small, quaint town Chatta leaned from the window, looking at the sky.

Upward slanting rays of sun already set caught an airplane skimming high overhead in a dazzling radiance, turning it to burnished silver.

The VOICE of the CITY

by GILBERT ROGERS

CHAPTER 7.

DON WILKES' eyes burned in his face. His calm, tired manner seldom deserted him, but when once it did, he seemed to lose all control, to become almost maniacal.

Some nerve in him seemed to snap now. He followed Johnny the Hop into the corner, towering over him.

You porch-climbing thief," he said quickly. "I told you once I didn't like you."

He swung his arm back. There was a cry from Beebe, but his fist shot out. Johnny's head went back. He gave no outcry, but his eyes were pools of hate.

A DEFIANCE.

The next instant Don had caught sight of Beebe's face, with its startled and half-contemptuous look. By a violent effort, he mastered himself. The blue veins in his forehead stood out like a big V. He laughed awkwardly, and turned toward her.

"I'm sorry," he muttered. "I lost my head. Please, Beebe, overlook it, won't you? I was just furious that anyone was keeping me in the dark at a time like this."

Beebe did not answer. Had he shaken her belief in him forever? His heart gave a leap at the thought. He had never felt like that before, about any woman.

Though it would have given him pleasure to have killed Johnny where he stood, he managed even to change his voice.

"Sorry, Johnny," he murmured. "Forget it, will you? And tell me, where is Doyle. What have you done with him?

For the first time Johnny the Hop spoke.

"Find out!" he snapped.

"You say that to me?" Don asked deliberately.

Johnny's eyes were still afraid, but still dark with hate.

"I say that to you!" he answered defiantly.

"In other words," Don continued, "you know where he is and you won't tell me."

"I don't know where he is . . ."

"No?"

"But if I did, I wouldn't tell you!" Johnny finished vindictively.

Don Wilkes' fingers itched. He would have enjoyed sinking them into Johnny's throat. He disliked the drug-addict because from the first Johnny had seen through him, through his pretenses, with uncanny intuition.

He dared not look at Johnny again for fear he would let himself go once more. He turned instead to Beebe, as he caught the knob of the door.

A PROMISE DEMANDED.

"Mark my words, Beebe, if you love Bobby Doyle as you say you do, you're a very silly girl to put his life into the hands of this wicked hophead. That's all I'm going to say. If you want me for anything—let me know!"

The hurt in he had gone. Johnny the Hop flung himself into a chair. His face was distorted. He swore softly and foully at Beebe.

"Johnny — Johnny — you're all wrong," Beebe faltered.

"That's the second time he's hit me in the face," Johnny said.

"I know. He hadn't any right. He must have been out of his head.

What Has Happened So Far

Bobby Doyle, framed by Dapper Don Wilkes and sentenced to prison for killing a policeman, is aided to escape by his fiancee, Beebe Barrett. Beebe is assisted by Johnny the Hop, who hides Bobby in a secret room in his apartment. Don Wilkes sees Beebe. He has given her money, telling her it is due Bobby, and is evidently in love with Beebe. He tries to get her to say where Bobby is hiding, but she refuses to tell. Then Johnny walks in. Wilkes, in a rage, tells her that he knows that Johnny had hidden Bobby.

Now Go on With the Story

But it made him lose his temper when he saw we didn't trust him. It's our fault, Johnny. Because he's been Bobby's friend right along."

Johnny did not even answer that. He caught Beebe's hand suddenly and looked up at her.

"Promise me again—you hear?" he demanded in a dry, shaken voice. "Promise me you won't never tell that guy anything."

She wanted to argue, she wanted to cry to explain to him, to unjust. She was torn with pity for him, and resented the blow Don had given Johnny. Then she thought she tried to apologize for it to herself as much as Johnny.

But looking at him now, realizing that it was through him after all that Bobby was today outside of the prison walls, recalling all his unselfishness and kindness, she felt she had no choice but to agree to anything he asked for so fervently.

"All right," she said. "I'll not say anything else to him. I'll keep my word, Johnny."

Then he seemed to relax, and some of the tension went out of his face.

A NOTE FOR BEEBE

"You haven't told me about Bobby yet," Beebe said. "All I know was that he got there safely. How is he now—tell me everything."

"He gave me a note for you," Johnny said.

When she had read it and then reread it, she asked Johnny to wait while she wrote an answer.

She returned from the inner room presently and gave it to him. She noted that his face was twitching more than usual. He looked beaten and sick. Beebe read the message of his craving. He left hurriedly, scarcely even saying goodby.

When Don Wilkes left Beebe's apartment he was furious with himself. He was glad he had hit Johnny, and sorry that Beebe had seen him do that.

But at one moment he felt he had lost more ground than he had gained from weeks of solicitous sympathy and a hundred thoughtful acts.

But he brushed aside his regret. He had enough to do, he knew that now, and he meant to use blunt tactics from this moment. He made his way downtown to Inspector Wilmot's office. Biff Myers was the man he wanted; he knew that Wilmot had assigned Biff to this particular case.

When he arrived, however, Wilmot kept him waiting for a long time. More than once Dapper Don jumped up to leave, but always sat down again, fuming at being treated like this. Yet even he hesitated to burst into the Inspector's office uninvited.

A SARCASTIC REMINDER.

When at last he was admitted he did not hesitate to show his irritation.

"Where's Biff?" he demanded, surly.

"If you came down to ask me that, you've wasted your time."

"You don't know where he is?"

"Not at this moment. But he may be in shortly. Got anything to tell him?"

"Maybe."

"Then you can tell me and save time."

Don considered this for a second. Before he had made up his mind, the man he was looking for came into the office.

Wilmot nodded. "Don has got something for you, Biff. Wouldn't tell me. Maybe he wants to donate a few more grand to the pension fund, like likes the force." If you want Doyle just follow Johnny the Hop—he knows where he is!"

He slapped his hat on his head, picked up his stick and kicked the door open without another word.

Are You Really in Love?

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX
An Authority on the Problems of Love and Marriage

HAVE you ever been madly in love?

Most of us, early in youth, go through that phase of magnificent, but hopeless, love, which in the vast majority of cases is either unrequited or very short lived. For outside the pages of novels and short stories, first love is seldom successful.

As we grow older, we learn through experience to restrain our emotion and temper it with wisdom. We acquire a certain technique. And love, like every other fine art, is founded on technique, which means intelligent application of rules and plans. Then our love is more sound and triumphant. It is doubtful whether love is ever won by emotion alone.

"Caution? I should say not!" exclaims emotional Elise. "Who wants to be cautious about love! I'll trust my heart every time!"

The philosophy sounds attractive, but how does it work out?

Elise fans in love, let us say, with Henry. She does not study him or analyze her own feelings. Nor does she proceed deliberately to charm him and interest him.

Blinded by her own emotion, Henry's very faults fascinate Elise. When his mania is mentioned, her pulse quickens. She stammers with uncontrolled feeling when she discusses him. Her eyes, her manner betray her.

And Henry, instead of being impressed with Elise, is amused at his own easy conquest and the hopeless devotion expressed in her eyes. Or perhaps he is sorry for her. He finds Elise, who ordinarily is a bright, entertaining girl, dumb and dull because she is too wrapped up in her feelings to use her wits.

Those who are madly in love in nearly all cases defeat their own ends by their own uninteresting behavior. If, as rarely happens, infatuation is mutual and leads to marriage, it soon gives way to satiety. It is impossible to live long on honey and chocolate creams without being satiated. And too many thrills, caresses, kisses, turn attraction to repulsion.

Mary and Max are of different religions, have entirely different backgrounds of home and home surroundings. Mary has wealth in her own right. Max, a former college football hero, works for a modest salary.

The two meet during a charming winter vacation in Florida, where interest in swimming and dancing leads to constant companionship. After six weeks' courtship they become engaged, against the advice of both families.

"Mary is the perfect girl!" is Max's answer to every effort to dissuade him from marrying Mary.

"Max is my hero—my football hero!" insists Mary.

Before the honeymoon is over these two strong-willed young people begin to clash. Mary's religion means everything to her. She wants to convert Max, who is true-blue to the theology of his childhood. Neither will compromise.

Max insists that they live on his salary; Mary wants to lavish her wealth on her surroundings. Mary is all for a home in the country; Max finds the city more convenient.

Each is determined to have his own way. Both are hurt and angry. Of late Reno has loomed in the perspective. Failure to agree has left these two adamant against each other and marriage, but they do not blame their own stupidity in the matter. Had gotten in marrying without waiting to find out whether they were compatible.

Even now, faced with the situation as it stands, if Mary and Max would make good-humored adjustments and not expect the impossible of each other, they could salvage their marriage. But adjustment and compromise are unknown in the lexicon of those who marry for infatuation, and from loving madly too often proceed to dislike each other blindly.

Temper your emotion with wisdom. Let your head guide your heart. Keep your wits about you and use your common sense if you would win and hold love. Only tolerance can hold the home together, and the home must be held together if human beings are to find happiness and good.

Study the romances and marriages of men who have made a sound, happy, worth-while success of their lives, and you will find they proceed with caution and deliberation.

I am thinking of three young men, each distinguished, brilliant, successful, who have found romance during the past year. All three established a fine, platonic friendship before serious courtship began. In two cases, love was founded on friendship, admiration and companionship dating back two years or more. All three of these successful young Americans chose girls of the athletic, outdoor type, combining the character and lovely feminine qualities of the old-fashioned girl and the flapper at her best. In each case the young man waited until he was earning enough to support a wife before he proposed. All three young men were between twenty-five and thirty when they married. The girls ranged from twenty to twenty-four. Two of the three young men, and two of the young men are college-bred.

Those marriages have every chance of success because they are established on a foundation of character and suitability as well as liking and love.

Love has its moments of mad ecstasy, when space and time and all but love is forgotten. These rare moments of thrilling joy are made possible by sane friendship, unselfish devotion and interesting companionship, which make up the interval between the peaks.

You cannot succeed in love and marriage any more than you can in school work, or as an aviator, a business woman, an artist, without heeding alike your heart and head. Not mad emotion, but sound, sane affection, liking glorified by love, leads to the crown of happy romance for which you long.

Beauty Hints

By MARIA JERITZA

"HAVE you been ill? You are looking dreadful!"

This tactless, but sincere, greeting from an acquaintance she had not seen for several months, aroused a certain woman I know to instant alertness.

"Your face is filled with tiny wrinkles," added the sympathetic acquaintance. "Just as though you had been ill for a long time."

"I've been working hard and had a touch of insomnia—perhaps that accounts for the wrinkles," smiled my friend in her most charming manner. But she was thinking fast.

"Wrinkles, wrinkles all over my face—how terrible! What can account for them!"

That night before retiring she examined her face far more critically than was her wont. Sure enough! A tiny network of fine lines had overspread her face, especially the region about her eyes, where the skin is delicate and impressionable. In a flash she realized the cause.

Winter weather had been raging for over two months, with high, dry, cold winds. She had been so absorbed in any number of interests that she had completely neglected seasonal complexion needs. Her face had parched for lack of oil, natural food of the tissue.

Night and morning she had been cleansing her face, neck and ears with cold cream, removing excess of cream, then bathing her face in very warm, next in icy cold water and finally applying a mild skin tonic as a powder basis. This regime had worked perfectly in warm and mild weather, but with the first sharp cold wave, it proved devastating.

That night, after its cold-cream bath was carefully removed, my friend's complexion, including neck and ears, received a generous meal of purest oil of sweet almonds, which she patted in on her finger-tips.

"The oil is just as good for my finger-tips and nails as it is for my complexion," she reasoned.

Night and morning she applied this sponge bath of best grade almond oil to her neck and face and finger-tips, letting it sink in over night, keeping it on her face mornings until it was time to dress for the day. She omitted warm water because it is drying and contented herself with a cold-cream cleansing, followed by the almond-oil bath. Finally, when the last trace of oil had been absorbed or removed, she sponged her face and neck with a teacupful of ice-water to which she added a few drops of witchhazel. This mild tonic closed pores and hardened her face for the wintry winds it would encounter outside.

"My, how well you're looking!" remarked the same tactless but honest acquaintance when she again met my friend 10 days later. "The lines are all gone—you look years younger."

My friend was satisfied. For she knew this compliment was truthful, not mere flattery.

The needs of the wholesome complexion are simple: Daily, thorough cleansing with soap and water, or warm then cold water or else cold cream, according to the season of the year, climate and its own texture; pure bland oil or else skin-food to nourish and smooth it unless it is naturally oily; gentle stimulation by means of a liquid astringent.

With a basis of vigorous health, plus sensible food, outdoor exercise and the simple aids I have just described, you should be able to keep your complexion as flawless as that of a six-months-old baby.

STAGE SCREEN MUSIC

BOWLING PUTS 'RAINBOW MAN' OVER BIG

Bostonians can be proud of their own Eddie Dowling, not only for the way he makes his bow into talkiedom, but for the surprising industry and versatility he shows in this initial movie vehicle of his. He stands out most brightly and entertainingly in "The Rainbow Man," screened at the Washington St. Olympia and Fenway this week. The success of this photoplay should go down largely to the credit of this singing son of South Boston.

Eddie Dowling

He wrote the story. He wrote songs for it. He acts the title role. Thus he sets himself up in the role of all-round cad; but unlike the Jack of the proverb, he seems to be a master in most of the things he does. Certainly, his friends and admirers can be proud of him, and doubtless they will be.

There is a fine human appeal in the story. It seems all so simple, just flows along naturally and unobtrusively, gets its grip and holds it. The sex stuff is abjured; you will get a taste of the honey variety of plot that so long and so well served its purpose in fiction and on the stage.

A big feature, and one that should surely make a hit, is the minstrel show within screen play. Remember the long-gone parades of the minstrel men? And how they carried on that night behind the footlights? You will for the old memories swarm back as you watch this film.

Dowling has clever support. Marion Nixon is an unaffected sweetheart, doing her part sweetly and well. Frankie Darro is a corking good screen boy, ably aiding the bigger folk in putting it all across.

The film marks the entry into the field of Sono-Art, a new method of sound reproduction.

In 'Rainbow Man'

Marion Nixon scores new screen honors in Eddie Dowling's first talkie, "The Rainbow Man," on the screen this week at the Washington St. Olympia and the Fenway.

Improvement Asso. Officers Elected

The Third Section Improvement Association of East Boston has elected the following officers for the year: John Ghem, president; George C. Lawler, vice president; James McCusker, treasurer; Mrs. M. Crowell, secretary; Mrs. J. Swansberg, chairman of directors, assisted by Mrs. G. Ghem, Miss Margaret Gorman, Mrs. M. Lawlor; Mrs. M. Lowell, chairman of the sick committee, assisted by Mrs. A. Arthur; John Ghem, George C. Lawlor, Richard C. Kirby, Steven Powell, general committee.

Membership in the organization is open to all residents of that part of East Boston, the purpose being to obtain betterments.

FAST MOVING SHOW AT THE SCOLLAY SQ.

Clara Bow and her gang are making "whoopee" in "The Wild Party" this week at the Scollay Square Theater. They dance, caper, play basketball, drive autos, pet and neck, in fact everything in the category of the whoopee-making "hey-hey" college girl. There are 12 "starlets" in the cast with Clara Bow. Clara has an opportunity in this film to demonstrate her prowess as a speaking actress. Frederic March furnished the male appeal in the play in the role of a college professor. The story of "The Wild Party" is from the pen of Warner Fabiar. There is an undercurrent of romance in the play, which bubbles to the surface in the last few scenes.

Clara Bow

On stage Roger Imhof, monarch of hokum comedy, in the revival of his most famous creation, "The Fast House," is assisted by Marcella Corcene and company. Mr. Imhof is a pedlar just getting through work at 5 o'clock, when he meets Miss Corcene, a nurse, in front of a hotel.

The conversation and actions that follow cause laughter. Dave Seed and Ralph Austin, in their travesty "Success," use their better knowledge of high-class comedy and burlesque to advantage.

A charming singer of character songs, Ruth Ford, is responsible for the high repute in which her name is held in vaudeville. She is a teller of tales in which the narratives have a musical accompaniment. Miss Ford sings these ditties in a delightful way, that is materially enhanced by the adroit manner in which her offering is staged. Chevalier Bros. proclaim themselves as entertainers of a different type. The High Hat Revue closes the vaudeville bill with youthful and speedy dances of all kinds.

'SPEAKEASY' AT TWIN HOUSES

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

Here is a vociferous voice of the city, cacophonously achieved; and also here is the best film flight in some moons. Here is, too, a close-up view of life in one of the many open places where the wet begins, for the entertainment of those who may not be initiated as patrons. Such are the features of "Speakeasy," all-talkie at the Modern and Beacon this week. It lives up to its title and then some.

The story is just pure melodrama, not the strongest in the world, but there are picture and other touches that make "this screen play a seething center of interest and excitement.

The raucous noises of city life are all there—a symphony if you are sympathetic to its topsy-turvydom, a striking portrayal of certain angles of metropolitan activity. Scenes and sounds are cleverly done, a great credit to Director Benjamin Stoloff.

For the fans of the squared circle, the prizefighting is about the next best thing to the real stuff. Round after round it goes, punch and parry, upsetting to the nerves and likely to create applause. The picturing is splendid, the cameramen having taken shots from every conceivable angle, all peppy.

Oldtimers in the cast will please. Henry B. Walthall is there, and also Helen Ware. Both are fine, as is also a younger friend, Sharon Lynn. Paul Page does the hero role of collegian who is also pugilist; Lola Lane tries the part of newspaper reporter who works the hero's salvation. Joseph Cawthorne is also in the play.

You may not think much of the story, but you will probably hugely enjoy the film clear through to the finish. It has its laughs galore, and its thrills, too.

On the bill also is a talking chapter of "The Collegians"—"The King of the Campus" with George Lewis and Dorothy Gulliver. Other features are Will Mahoney in "Why Be Serious," and Chick Sale in "The Star Witness."

VOICES IN "SPEAKEASY"

Lola Lane and Paul Page in an intimate scene from the talkie hit, "Speakeasy," now at the Modern and Beacon. Lola is doing her prettiest best to cheer up Paul, who is way down in the doldrums.

Solicitor Is Not Dr. Muck's Brother

Boston police yesterday broadcast a warning to the public to be on the lookout for a man claiming to be a brother of Dr. Karl Muck, formerly leader of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who is soliciting money from music followers on the ground of his alleged relationship. The police say he is a fraud.

100,000 Flock to Revere Beach

More than 100,000 persons and thousands of automobiles, as many as seen at Revere Beach on the hottest days in summer, visited the North Shore resort.

Only about 20 persons were seen in bathing along the stretch of sands and the water was reported as quite cold.

Value and Power of Music

Children Should Be Taught to CREATE It, Not Merely to Listen

"But be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only."

This Biblical admonition might well apply to music as well as to good deeds.

Merely to HEAR what is good or beautiful is not enough. We should also be DOERS, producers, contributing to the best of our ability.

Parents, interested in their children's development, should have the children taugh to play some musical instrument, and not allowed to go through life merely as self-indulgent LISTENERS.

Horace Walpole said: "Had I children, my utmost endeavors would be to make them musicians."

It is not necessary to emphasize the importance of music in human life. Every intelligent reader realizes it.

Language is the voice of the thinking mind.

MUSIC IS THE VOICE OF THE SOUL ITSELF.

A few notes of a familiar old song will take us back long years, swiftly, as lightning moves through the sky.

Music is to the mind what a plow is to the soil, it stirs up thought, increasing the fertility of the productivity of the brain.

Listening to beautiful music, the mind and its thinking power expand, as flowers expand in sunlight.

Disraeli says: "Curran's favorite mode of meditation was with his violin in his hands; for hours together would he forget himself, running voluntaries over the strings while his imagination, collecting its tones, was opening all his faculties for the coming emergency at the bar."

Music adds power to the intellect.

Music inspires, increases courage, affection, strengthens the best emotions and impulses of the spirit.

Wise were ancient kings that sent their soldiers to battle and death with music leading them.

Millions will die to the tune of a patriotic song, gladly giving their lives to their country.

BEETHOVEN, WHO SHOULD KNOW, SAID: "MUSIC SHOULD STRIKE FIRE FROM THE HEARTS OF MEN, AND BRING TEARS FROM THE EYES OF WOMEN."

We live in an age abounding in music; much of it is good, a great deal of it, unfortunately, inferior.

But inferior music leads to BETTER music.

Martin Luther said:

"Music is one of the fairest and most glorious gifts of God, to which Satan is a bitter enemy; for it removes from the heart the weight of sorrow and the fascination of evil thoughts."

Music indicates mental happiness, freedom from care. "Give me the man who sings at his work," says Carlyle.

Of all animals, the birds were first to sing. They sang long before men appeared on the earth.

The birds sing because, being able to fly, and safe above the dangers of earth, in beautiful sunlight, music came to them naturally.

A life without music is a life without inspiration. Disraeli says again:

"Lord Bacon had music often played in the room adjoining his study.

"Milton listened to his organ for his solemn inspirations; and music was ever necessary to Warburton. The symphonies which awoke in the poet sublime emotions might have composed the inventive mind of the great critic in the visions of his theoretical mysteries."

Every home where children and young people are should have musical instruments, and if possible a different one for each child.

A home without a piano is like a house without a fireplace.

The radio is marvelous, the talking machine is a triumph of science. It does for music, and great artists, what bound volumes on your shelves do for the genius of science, literature and poetry.

But, "BE YE DOERS OF THE WORD AND NOT HEARERS ONLY."

Be ye producers of music, not LISTENERS only.

A piano trains the mind, the fingers and the intelligence.

A violin, of all instruments, comes nearest to the perfection of the human voice. Musical instruments of all kinds, down to the schoolboy's banjo and groaning saxophone—all have their place in the home, and should be there.

Every house, of course, should have a radio, the best that can be got. Every house should have a good talking machine, which supplies dance music and the most beautiful songs of the greatest artists, when and as they are wanted.

The radio is like a marvelous guest entertaining the family.

And every family, above all, should possess instruments that alone can develop music, FROM WITHIN.

See that your children learn to produce something, to bring music from within outward.

The word "education" means "lead out," not "push in."

If there is music in your children, BRING IT OUT.

This is "Music Week."

Make it a reality in your home, remembering these sayings:

Carlyle—"Music is well said to be the speech of angels."

Napoleon—"Music, of all the liberal arts, has the greatest influence over the passions, and is that to which the legislator ought to give the greatest encouragement."

Longfellow—"Music is the universal language of mankind."

The great poet, Keats, said: "Let me have music dying, and I seek no more delight." That is a good idea for one DYING. Music on leaving the world, and music beyond the imagination of mankind as you enter the other world, would make a noble exit and a glorious entrance.

But remember that even in Heaven, where there is no other work, the angels sing and play on the harp. They do not merely listen. And you will have to do the same.

Have your children learn to play some instrument, let them be DOERS OF THE WORD, producers of music.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, May 6—Diary of a modern Pepys: Up betimes to the dentist and on the way saw a window of sewing samples, one of which would make a fine shirting for Gene Markey. Saw also Roland Young, the actor, who wears glasses with a wide black ribbon and carries a cane with a carved wooden head.

After resolving to eat nothing until dinner was tempted beyond my poor strength by the tantalizing odors of a Welsh rarebit and felt like a stuffed owl the rest of the day. Home and made feeble effort to appear busy but spent most of the time hunting hidden animals in the children's page drawings.

In the evening with my wife to dinner and talked to Sam Kingston, Mae Murray and several others and on to the theater, but the play so inane nodded through it. Ended evening relating by a ringing being a chat with Rupert Hughes on the way out.

Three revues feature the yarn about the swanky tobacco shoppe where the bored A la ita bronzed and where a gentleman appeared with a patent lighter.

"You have all the necessary parts for this?" he inquired of the "clerk."

"Most assuredly," was the response, registering ennui over such trivata.

"Well," announced the customer, "I've run out of thumbs."

There is a millionaire who has frittered away a stupendous sum to satisfy the artistic longings of a young and good-looking wife. Her talents are limited and despite his generous "angeling" has never clicked in a big way. His years are reaping the inevitable toll and his walk has the suspicion of a dodder. But she is young, still ambitious and beginning to look a trifle bored.

Astute amusement purveyors declare that in the battle for recognition personality is 98 per cent of the struggle. Without this quality, dramatic ability, voice and other talents are worthless. In the less serious forms of entertainment, for instance, such song definators as Helen Morgan, Helen Kane, Zelma O'Neal, the Duncan Sisters, Eddie Cantor and even Al Jolson have no extraordinary vocal ability. But they get the money.

In high-class dressmaking establishments it is not unusual for a customer to order 20 gowns at a time—usually such orders are for a whirl at Palm Beach or some European spa. The whoppingest order of all came from a movie actress with suddenly acquired fame who ordered 60 evening frocks at a clip. "And that," said my informant, "is a mess of sewing." I'll say it is needle work!

A Broadwayite reports a cultural improvement among theater box office men. While not exactly greeting customers with a big hug, they have undergone a slight thaw. He says: "The boys now put their hand over their mouth when they yawn in your face."

A New York newspaper turns an editorial handspring over a banker who has three different suits of clothes for every week in the year. That's nothing so much. There is a newspaper columnist who has a suit for every day in the year. And he never has it pressed, either.

And at one of the theatrical clubs a member wound up a week's toot by sleeping all day in the main lounge. Some of the practical jokers got a slice of limburger cheese and very carefully smeared it over his mustache and carried him off to bed. The next morning the entire club was aroused by his moans and groans. A neighbor, not in on the joke, went in and assured him he merely had a hang-over. "I tell you I'm dying," he ooo-ooohed and added: "Spoiling from the inside."

Meditations of a Wife

By HELEN ROWLAND

EVERY now and then some woman carelessly shoots her husband—and then promptly forgets all about it. It just slips her mind!

And when she finds herself before a jury, she "can't remember a thing that happened."

Women should carry memorandum pads around with them, and jot such things down. Shooting a husband may be all in the day's work, but these little things are apt to come up later.

Men's memories have ALWAYS been independable. They begin forgetting right at the altar! If you asked a man, 10 minutes after the wedding ceremony, just what he had promised a woman, he probably couldn't remember his wedding vows. A man can kiss his wife goodbye, after breakfast, and immediately forget her existence the moment a flapper catches his eye.

This does not imply that man has a BAD memory. Oh, no, he has a GOOD memory—a nice, tame, well-trained memory that never reminds him of anything he wants to forget!

It is woman's memory that has always been a torment, both to herself and to men. It rides her like the Old Man of the Sea, and never lets her forget ANYTHING—a mistake, an injury or a man's faults.

The poet has said that "memory is the perfume of life"—but, in a man's opinion, lots of women's memories are more like castor oil than like roses.

Years after she has done something ultra-foolish, she can close her eyes, conjure up the embarrassing scene and blush down to her toes.

Long after she has married another man, the sound of a street organ grinding out an old tune or the fragrance of lilacs will waft her back to a lost April and the romance that went blah—or the man who got away.

Women should carry memorandum pads around with them, and jot such things down. Shooting a husband may be all in the day's work, but these little things are apt to come up later.

THE "pH"

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

I HAVE just been reading in a weekly scientific journal, published with the purpose of keeping scientists themselves informed of what their brethren are doing, and incidentally to help the public to some scientific knowledge, a fascinating account of the "pH"—fascinating especially for the mystery it weaves about its subject, in which respect it resembles a detective story in which the criminal should never be made known to the reader except by an unexplained symbol.

Yet the thing with which the "pH" is concerned is of universal interest, viz.: eggs. The home of this mysterious jinn of science appears to be the white of the egg, and we are informed that he is an important factor influencing the keeping quality of hen's eggs. That strikes everybody from the poultry raiser to the housewife; from the farmer's boy hiding his nestful of "Pass eggs" in the haymow to the grocer's clerk who is asked to define precisely what the phrase "fresh-laid" implies.

The cabalistic sign-name "pH" appears no less than 35 times in the short article referred to, but not once is defined. Some readers might infer its meaning from a couple of fine-print footnotes which are intended, however, only as references to other papers, and not for the purpose of offering any definition, or explanation. The dictionary would not help the reader and if he succeeds through his special technical knowledge, or through the exercise of his divining powers, in getting some idea of what "pH" is, he will owe no thanks to the author of this esoteric production.

Consider this, the last sentence of the article, which gives the final fillip to the uninformed reader's mystification: "The possibility of the control of the pH of the egg contents as a factor in egg preservation has apparently not previously been considered, and yet our experiments have shown that it ranks among the first in importance."

If the interested reader had been told that the "pH" was, for instance, "the hydrogenion concentration in the white of an egg," he might have still wished for further information, but at least he would have been placed in a position to get it, since now he could have referred to the dictionary, or to ordinary scientific books, to aid him. But why should he be left to guess at all?

This is not hyper-criticism. It is something that needs to be said and many times repeated. Technical terms in public prints are like laboratory clothes in a parlor. They should be reserved for purely technical publications. When of restricted application they are as objectionable and as puzzling to scientists in general as to other men. If an investigator has time to describe the results of his work for the benefit of the world, he should take the very little additional time needed to define his special terms in such a manner as to bring them, at least, within dictionary limits. If he thinks that in so doing he is being undignifiedly elementary there must be a screw loose in his mental machinery. Learned terms do not make science. One sometimes hears scientists wishing that the general public had a better knowledge of science. Well, if they desire to furnish it, they must cease to assume that everybody has the time, or the incentive, to become familiar with all the aspects of their many-faced technicalities and abbreviations, whose number grows faster than they can be listed.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

BIG BILL BROWN'S been telling me about The Dear Little Woman at Home.

About what a Tartar she is—

How's a she's always crabbing about something and blaming him for something he hasn't done—

How she won't let him go off on fishing trips with the fellows or play golf Saturday afternoons or stay out late for a little game of poker—

And raises Cain generally.

"It's certainly surprising what a row a little bit of a woman like that can kick up," says Bill. "Of course, I don't mind it. That's the way women are and a man's a fool if he takes them serious. They can't see things the way men do. You gotta kind of humor them."

Bill smiles condescendingly as he says this. He wants you to believe that he's a great, big, patient, wise bimbo who's coddling along a pesty little weakling that can't help itself.

He's talked that way so often that he almost believes it himself. But you can see he's worried. For everyone knows that Bill Brown's the worst henpecked man in town and that no matter how hard he tries to please her the Missus gets meaner all the time.

The truth is, of course, that Bill's kidding himself with his weak-lit-the-woman line.

Bill concludes that his wife is weak because she wears skirts and is about half his size. Also because it soothes his masculine vanity to pretend she's weak. As a matter of fact she has more energy in her little finger than he has in his whole spongey body. She goes through Bill's restless like a dum-dum bullet through a piece of cheese.

Bill pretends he lets her get that way because he's big hearted and chivalrous. The truth is, he lets her get that way because he can't help himself. And it's a shame. It's a shame because he's spoiling her life as well as his own by his cowardice.

She needs trimming—does Mrs. Bill. And, in the mysterious depths of her heart, she WANTS trimming.

She WANTS to feel that Bill is a big, powerful brute who won't stand for her nonsense.

She WANTS him to hand her a wallop on the jaw or its psychological equivalent.

She'd treasure and boast about that wallop. She'd treasure and boast about it for exactly that same reason that the primitive man treasured and boasted about her busted nose and blackened eye—BECAUSE IT WOULD PROVE THAT HER HUSBAND WAS A REGULAR GUY. IT WOULD ESTABLISH HER RATING IN THE MATRIMONIAL DUN AND BRADSTREET.

She married with that idea in mind and Bill has bitterly disappointed her.

That's why she is always mad—that's why she acts as if she had a secret grievance. She has!

BILL HAS PROVED A WEAKLING!

He has cheated her—and she'll never forgive him.

He may not have lost her love, but he has certainly lost her respect, and every time he lets her put something over on him he goes deeper into the doghouse.

You ought to get wise to yourself, William.

If you've contracted to be a husband, BE ONE!

DON'T BE A PUNCHING BAG!

WORDS OF THE WISE MEN

The world is a looking glass, and gives back to every man the reflection of his own face. Frown at it and it in turn will look sourly upon you; laugh at it and with it, and it is a jolly, kind companion.—Thackeray.

The religions of the world are the ejaculations of a few imaginative men.—Emerson.

Wit consists in knowing the resemblances of things which differ, and the difference of things which are alike.—De Stael

Truth is such a precious article, let us all economize its use.

Solitude is as needful to the imagination as society is wholesome for the character.—Lowell.

It is good to have money and the things that money can buy, but it's good, too, to check up once in a while and make sure you haven't lost the things that money can't buy.—Lorimer.

Fame is the thirst of youth—but I am not so young as to regard men's frown or smile. —Byron.
